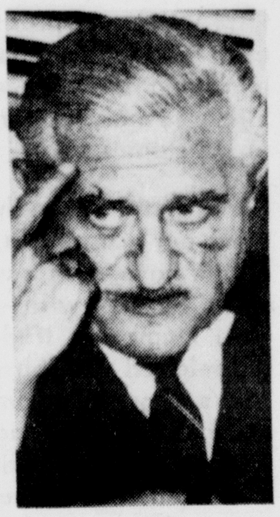
Kennedy Goes To Bat For His Trade Program



ACCUSES HOFFA — Samuel Baron, a Teamsters Union official, points to head injuries he says were inflicted yesterday in union headquarters in Washington by Teamsters President James Hoffa. WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy said Thursday night that "American business is determined to share in the phenomenal growth of the European Common Market" through expanded international trade.

In a speech for a bipartisan conference in support of his trade program, the President offered reassurance to businesses which may be hurt by increased imports.

"But let us not miss the real point," he added. "Let us not focus on the insurance policies that we forget the positive, new opportunities that will be opened up by trade. To falter now—to become afraid of the economic challenges we face, or to become impatient in the face of difficult and delicate diplomatic problems — could well undo all the great achievements of this nation in the postwar period."

In his talk to about 2,000 supporters of his trade program, at the Conference on Trade Policy, Kennedy reiterated his views on long-range U.S. relations with Europe along lines set forth at his news conference earlier in the day.

The United States is in Europe to stay, he emphasized, at least until Europeans ask this nation to leave.

He described as folly any fears that the United States may be excluded from the councils and markets of the Atlantic partnership or that the United States may abandon its commitment to European security.

Kennedy's effort to bolster powers came at the end of a day which saw him win an important victory in the House Ways and Means Committee. By a one-vote margin, this group approved Kennedy's recommendations for benefits to workers who are adversely affected by increased imports under his program. This was the last major controversial hurdle to be cleared by the legislation in the House committee.

House leaders expect to call the bill up for action early next month and the Senate will act later.

What Democrats regard as an encouraging sign in the developing drive for Kennedy's over-all trade program came Thursday in the Senate.

Holding party lines firmly, the administration won passage of a bill to give the President authority to curb imports of cotton textiles from the countries which are not parties to the international cotton export-import agreement reached at Geneva by 19 nations.

Housing Starts Show Big Gain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another substantial gain in homebuilding activity was recorded in April, the Commerce Department announced Thursday. Privately-owned housing starts rose to a rate of 1,542,000 a year.

The April building was an 8 per cent gain from March and was 32 per cent above the April 1961 rate of 1,166,000 new houses and apartments a year.

The Census Bureau figures bolstered the evidence of a strong pickup in business activity generally. Government reports of the past week showed that April had set new records for industrial production, retail sales, and personal income.

Privately owned housing starts totaled 146,900 in April, compared with 117,000 in March. Publicly financed housing units brought the over-all total to 150,600 for the month.

U.S. Forces Welcomed By Thais

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)—U.S. Marines, lugging bristling loads of military hardware, set up their first camps Thursday night along Thailand's Mekong River rim.

They were in a position to back up the Laotian government if Communist forces launch any attempt to seize southern Laos, though military spokesmen said the Marines' only purpose is to defend Thailand against any aggression.

Looking trim despite their mottled jungle uniforms, the force of 1,800 Leathernecks moved easily in Bangkok's turgid heat as they unloaded tons of equipment from helicopters and warships.

The first units of the task force were flown immediately from Bangkok's Don Muang airport in big U.S. C130 transports to Udon, 350 miles northeast of the Thailand capital.

Unit Camps At Nong Lahan

Marines of the 3rd Battalion, 9th Regiment, from Okinawa, set up camp at Nong Lahan, 20 miles east of Udon, in a flat area that is hot and dusty in summer, soggy in winter.

The camp is 40 miles southeast of Vientiane, the Laos administrative capital across the Mekong River. This is more than 200 miles southeast of the segment of Thailand's far northern border that was exposed to infiltration by the recent offensive of pro-Communist Pathet Lao forces in northwest Laos.

Other Marines were expected to be moved to a 500-mile arc extending along the Mekong southeast of Udon to Ubon near the southern tip of Laos.

American spokesmen said the U.S. Army's Battle Group of the 27th Regiment—about 1,300 men—was being moved back to a camp 50 miles southwest of Khorat. That center, 130 miles northeast of Bangkok, has rail and road connections with Udon and Ubon.

Reinforcements From Hawaii

The Army group is part of a Southeast Asia Treaty Organization maneuver force here two weeks ago. It is to be reinforced by more than 1,000 Army men from Hawaii in a few days to make up the 5,000-man force ordered into Thailand by President Kennedy under U.S. defense obligations to this Southeast Asian nation.

British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan announced that Royal Air Force units would be sent if they are requested. The British Air Ministry said rocket-equipped jet fighters were standing by at Singapore ready to hop here.

Authoritative sources in Canberra said Australia probably will send 200 officers and men of a commando-parachute company with previous experience in SEATO maneuvers in Thailand.

Official sources in Paris said the government is studying an American request for a token force. France formerly ruled Laos as a part of its Indochina empire.

Railroads Halt Negotiations On Work Rules

CHICAGO (UPI) — The nation's railroads broke off negotiations with five operating brotherhoods Thursday and bid for administration aid in implementing a presidential commission's recommendatons for a major overhaul of industry work rules.

The surprise move appeared to toss the long, bitter struggle over "featherbedding" onto the White House doorstep and could saddle President Kennedy with the job of heading of the first nationwide rail strike in 16 years.

Railroad bargainers charged tha the brotherhoods, representing 211,000 on-train employes, refused to negotiate on the controversial "featherbedding" issues.

Union spokesmen countered that the railroad bargainers "walked out on union negotiators." The unions said "we're ready to negotiate whenever they are."

J. E. Wolfe, chief bargainer and spokesman for the industry, said the railroads would serve notice on the unions within 10 days whether they would put into effect the commission recommendations, including proposals that eventually would eliminate more than 40,000 firemen's jobs.

Wolfe said that if the railroads decide to go ahead with the work rule changes, they would become effective within 30 days of the notice.

The railroad bargainers said they were making a report to Secretary of Labor Arthur Goldberg Thursday and would give "profound consideration" to any administration suggestions.

President Kennedy told his news conference that the administration was keeping in close touch with the situation and said if anything appropriate can be done by the federal government, it will be done.

Sobbing Girl Refugee Sent Back To Red China

HONG KONG (AP) — Weeping Lee Ying apparently has been sent back to Red China after clutching briefly at freedom.

A photograph of the sobbing girl refugee, taken as she learned she could not stay in this overcrowded British crown colony, attracted worldwide attention and sympathy.

The plight of the girl, 19 years old, holding a ragged handkerchief to her face, prompted American offers of a home and a job. The offers were cabled to The Associated Press bureau here, which distributed the picture, the U.S. consulate and Hong Kong officials.

Although the method of handling the refugee return operation makes positive confirmation impossible, it is 99.9 per cent certain that Lee Ying was sent back to Red China last Saturday mornng.

She was photographed on Friday afternoon by P. C. Lee, no relation, a cameraman for the English-language Hong Kong Tiger Standard after she had been caught with a small group of other refugees by British soldiers about two miles inside the Hong Kong border.

Senate Unit Gives Probe Green Light

McClellan Reports Vote To Scan Deals Of Texan Unanimous

WASHINGTON (AP) — A full-scale Senate investigation has been ordered into the political and financial manipulations of Billie Sol Estes.

The go-ahead for a probe that may reach into high echelons of both the Kennedy and Dwight D. Eisenhower administrations was voted Thursday at a 1½-hour closed-door session of the Senate's Permanent Investigations subcommittee headed by Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark.

How soon the hearings will start was left open. McClellan was reported hoping to get them under way late this month if sufficient groundwork has been prepared.

McClellan reported the vote was unanimous. He said there was no sign of any partisan discord among the Republican and Democratic members of the subcommittee.

Estes Subpoenaed

Estes, 37, of Pecos Tex., who piled up a complicated financial empire only to see it collapse in a welter of scandal and fraud charges, has been subpoenaed.

McClellan was inclined to discount Estes' testimony in advance telling newsmen "You can hardly expect him to come in here and testify against himself."

President Kennedy called in Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman, whose department has become directly involved in the Estes revelations, for a 20-minute conference Thursday.

McClellan told reporters after the subcommittee session that public hearings will start just as soon as his staff of investigators can organize a mass of documents.

Full Inquiry, McClellan Says

Thirty investigators are assigned to the case. Some of them have been busy since April 17 running down allegations of influence dealing which stemmed from Estes' indictment in Texas on fraud charges.

The inquiry, which may go on for six months or longer, will be full, thorough and complete, McClellan said.

Public hearings were authorized by the subcommittee starting at such time the staff is properly prepared, he said.

Mundt is the senior Republican on the subcommittee.

Man Kills Two, Takes Own Life

EAST MEADOW, N.Y. (AP)—A former mental patient went berserk early Thursday in an orgy of flame and fury that took the lives of his uncle, his aunt, and finally himself.

He first exploded crude gasoline bombs that set afire a Long Island home. Smoke killed his uncle in bed upstairs and flushed the aunt and two teen-aged cousins into flight.

Amid dancing flames, the killer, rifle in hand, awaited the women and shot them one by one before turning the weapon on himself. Only the girls escaped with their lives.

The slayer, Marvin Rosen, 29, had a record of family violence and had been under psychiatric observation for 10 years. He was discharged from a state mental institution last June and may have forecast his murderous rampage in threats he hurled at his aunt several months ago.

Rosen's victims were his uncle, Albert Mittleman, 42, a lawyer with an ailing heart who died of smoke poisoning in an upstairs bedroom of the Long Island home, and the aunt, Blanche, 39, shot in chest and abdomen as she fled from smoke and flame.

Rosen himself died inside his uncle's burning split-level home with a self-inflicted bullet wound in his chest.

Weather Only Orbital Flight Question Mark

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — The countdown for America's second manned orbital flight was marred Thursday by a plane crash which apparently wiped out a 14-man emergency recovery team and by bad weather which threatened to delay the shot until next week.

High winds and rough seas between Bermuda and the Azores Islands in the Atlantic Ocean dimmed hopes that Astronaut M. Scott Carpenter would be blasted off on the 17,500-mile per hour, three-orbit trip as scheduled Saturday.

Project Mercury officials gave Carpenter no better than a "50-50" chance of making his rocket ride on that day. The stormy Atlantic may force a postponement until Sunday, or perhaps next Tuesday. Preparations for the shot, which had gone like clockwork for several days, also were disrupted by the crash of an American C130 airplane near Nairobi, Kenya. It was en route to a Mercury tracking station in Zanzibar.

Mercury officials said the plane, which left from Evereu, France carried a small recovery force that might have been used in the event Carpenter's "Aurora-7" space capsule landed outside the three main recovery areas in the Atlantic Ocean.

But spokesmen said the crash would not delay the spaceflight itself. Another crew was flown to the Zanzibar station as a replacement force.

The weather, an ever-present bugaboo to the Mercury program, was the No. 1 headache again as the countdown moved to within two days of the planned Saturday morning launching time. Poor weather was predicted for Cape Canaveral and for at least one of the main landing areas.

Mercury experts described the weather system that was churning up the Atlantic with near-gale force winds and waves seven to 10 feet high as similar to the one that delayed the orbital flight of Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. for several days last February. However, it wasn't quite as intense.

Most of the trouble was centered in the open Atlantic from about 200 miles of Bermuda to the Azores, affecting the area where Carpenter would be expected to land should his flight be ended just before reaching orbital speed, or after one circuit of the globe.

Secret Army Bands Kill Five Europeans

ALGIERS (AP) — The secret army's terror killers broadened their attacks Thursday, turning guns against Europeans suspected of opposing their bloody violence.

At least five Europeans were killed and another disappeared as terrorists continued their attacks against Moslems in the hope of spurring enough chaos in this tortured land to wreck French plans for independence.

Mercury Space Project Plane Crashes; 14 Die

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — A U. S. Air Force transport plane carrying a recovery crew for the next space flight crashed into a steep cliff near the Nairobi Airport Thursday, killing all 14 men aboard. It was the worst disaster of the Mercury project program.

(National Aeronautics and Space Agency officials at Cape Canaveral, Fla., said the crash alone would not postpone the scheduled Saturday flight of astronaut Scott Carpenter but they feared bad weather might do so.)

The plane, a C130 Hercules, hit the cloud-covered cliff in the Ngong hills 15 miles southwest of Nairobi while approaching the airport for a landing. A second C130 with other Americans aboard had made a safe landing earlier.

A U. S. Information Service spokesman said there were "no important scientists" among the dead technicians and crewmembers.

Broker Tells Of Stock Deal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Shearson, Hammill & Co., a brokerage house which is a member of the New York Stock Exchange, told federal investigators Thursday it realized a profit of $143,118 in trading on a stock in which it was the principal dealer.

John D. Dunbar, a partner in charge of the firm's West Coast offices, indicated at a Securities & Exchange Commission (SEC) hearing that he alone cleared $42,800 on the stock.

Testimony on activities of Sharson, Hammill & Co. was completed Thursday in the latest phase of a broad SEC inquiry into operations of the entire securities industry. Congress asked for the inquiry, the most intensive of its kind since 1934.

Skipper Of New A-Sub Relieved After Collision

VALLEJO, Calif. (AP) — The skipper of the new nuclear-powered submarine Permit, damaged in a collision with a freighter off the Golden Gate May 9, has been relieved of his command, the Navy disclosed Thursday.

The officer, Cmdr. Ernest R. Barrett, was relieved as of Thursday.

The new commander will be Cmdr. Robert H. Blount, USN, currently on duty with the Navy in Washington, D.C. The 12th Naval Dist. said he might arrive before the Permit is commissioned at Mare Island May 29.

Meanwhile, Lt. Cmdr. C. F. Carlisle, commander of the submarine Swordfish, at Mare Island for overhaul, has been assigned as temporary commander.

The Permit, running submerged in precommissioning trials 30 miles off the Golden Gate about 11 p.m. May 9, scraped the bottom of the Matson freighter Hawaiian Citizen. Both vessels were damaged.

The Navy conducted its own investigation of the collision and refused to let any of its officers or men testify at a Coast Guard inquiry last week.

Neither the Navy nor Coast Guard has reported the results of its inquiry.

A three-man Navy board of investigation made a report on the accident to the 12th Naval Dist. which, in turn, forwarded recommendations to the chief of naval operations in Washington, D.C. The 12th Naval Dist. would not discuss the report, saying anything would have to come from Washington.

Waldorf Back To Normal As Service Strike Ends

NEW YORK (AP) — Service employes ended a two-day strike at the Waldorf-Astoria Thursday and the world famed hotel quickly was restored to its routine of elegance.

From its kitchens came the warm bird to settle amid snow-white napery atop restaurant tables. From its cellars came the accompanying cold bottle, to enhance the meals for its 1,600 guests.

Its public restaurants were closed Wednesday, and its banquet rooms put picnic sandwiches before guests who paid up to $20 a plate for this meager fare.

The strike began Sunday in a waiters' dispute over banquet tips and snowballed Tuesday into a full-fledged wildcat walkout of some 700 doormen, bartenders, bellhops, chambermaids, elevator operators and kitchen help.

The worst weekend ever at the Waldorf began Sunday when waiters walked out for 90 minutes to protest having to pass the plate for banquet tips in the grand ballroom. They demanded a flat percentage of banquet receipts as their tip.

A compromise was reached. But again on Tuesday the waiters walked out after eight of their union officials had been fired in reprisal for the Sunday demonstration. This time they were joined in sympathy by other service employes.

The New York Hotel Trades Council, the over-all union organization for the service employes, condemned the strike as unauthorized from the outset. It finally persuaded the strikers to return to their jobs while the firing of the eight waiters is being negotiated under grievance procedures.

JFK Reports Investigation Being Pushed

Kennedy Says U.S. Counting On Pact By Laotian Princes

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy said three times Thursday his administration brought the scandalous Billie Sol Estes case to light and that it "is staying right on Mr. Estes' tail" — with 75 FBI agents.

Kennedy said the administration is pushing a complete inquiry into operations of the Texan whose financial dealings have touched both Congress and the executive branch. The President assured a news conference that any federal employes who have committed improprieties — four already have quit or been fired—will be subjected to immediate action and discipline.

Kennedy said, and repeated twice, that the Estes case was brought to public attention when the federal government indicted him on April 5.

The government asked for $500,000 bail, the President said, and he is sorry it was cut to $100,000.

Among other matters coming up:

LAOS: What are the chances of getting caught in a shooting war, he was asked.

Kennedy said the three Princes of Laos will have a conference. "I hope they produce a government," he said, which is the U.S. objective.

U. S. Prefers Red Withdrawal

In reply to a further question, Kennedy said he can give no idea now how long U.S. troops will be kept in Thailand. That will depend on the situation, he said.

He was asked what he would consider satisfactory conditions for a cease-fire.

Kennedy said this country would prefer a withdrawal as nearly as possible to the positions held by the pro-Communist troops a week or so ago. But he said the thing immediately important is peace between the forces where they stand now.

As to the reason for dispatch of troops to Thailand, Kennedy said this government is concerned over the breach of the cease fire, the advance of Communist troops into Laos, and the possibility that the breach of the cease-fire might become a general one endangering the safety of Thailand.

The United States therefore communicated with the Thai government, he said, and Thailand invited the help of the U.S. armed forces.

EUROPE: The question was raised whether the differences between France and the United States are a hazard to the Western Alliance.

Decision Is Europe's

Kennedy said the Europeans must decide on whether they want confederation but the United States does want a voice in the problem of Berlin because if "the moment of truth comes" in the fate of that city, it will be the United States which will be expected to take action.

The situation will become increasingly dangerous, he said, if one nation after another joins the club of those having atomic capability.

But if France has decided it wishes to push ahead with the development of nuclear weapons, he said, it will of course do so.

Kennedy gave his opinion it will be a long time before the nations of Western Europe feel they can defend themselves without U.S. participation. He said the 300,000 U.S. troops there are obviously not there against the wishes of the countries. The day may come, he said, when Western Europe may feel it can assure its own security, and the United States can be relieved of its present purpose.

But that day has not come, he said, and NATO leaves no question of the intentions of the United States and its Allies.

Union Aide Charges Hoffa With Assault

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teamsters Union President James R. Hoffa was booked Thursday night on an assault charge sworn out by a Teamsters Union aide who said he had been beaten up Thursday morning at the union's headquarters.

Hoffa joked with newsmen and police as he was booked at Washington's First Precinct police station.

He told reporters he would have "nothing whatsoever" to say about the incident which brought the complaint by Samuel Baron of the Teamster's warehouse division.

Khrush Gives Farm Advice To Bulgarians

TOLBUKHIN, Bulgaria (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev rolled through the Bulgarian countryside Thursday in an open sea-green Cadillac advising the natives on how to turn this backward farm district into a "Bulgarian Iowa."

Shabbily dressed peasants dropped their hoes and scythes and stood for up to three hours under a hot sun along the highways waiting for a glimpse of the state visitor from Moscow.

Khrushchev switched from the Soviet-built auto he has used for the first four days of his visit here to a 4-year-old American convertible for the 31-mile trip to this district town from the Black Sea resort of Varna.

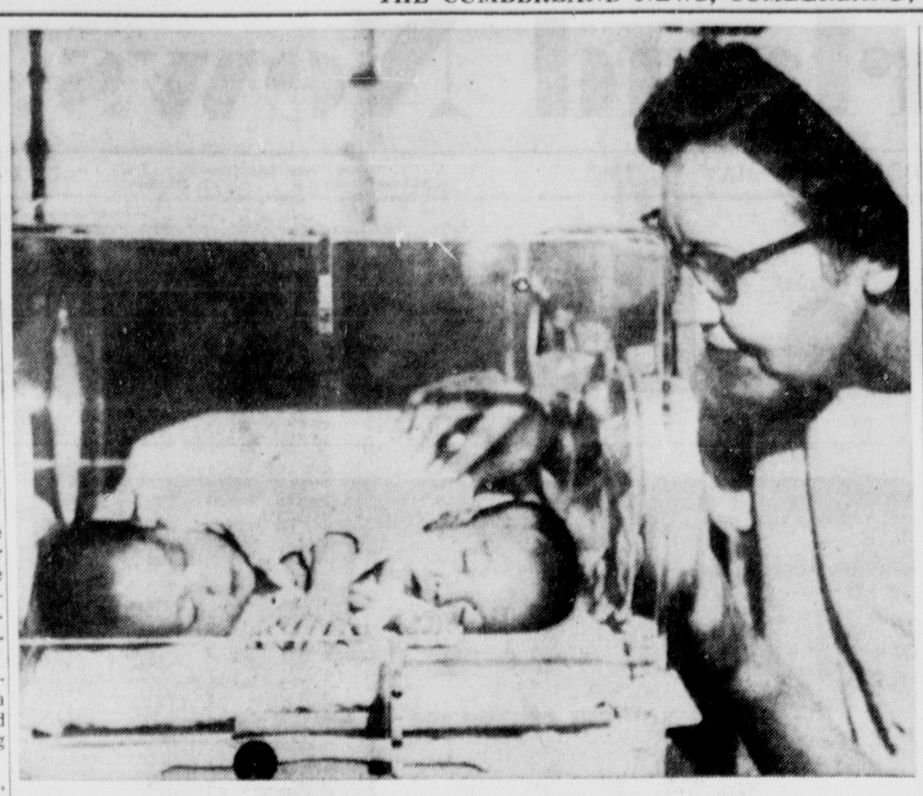
Tolbukhin, a town of about 46,000 population, was named after a Soviet marshal whose army freed Bulgaria from the Nazis during World War II.

In an off-the-cuff speech, Khrushchev touched briefly on international affairs, saying:

"Peace is necessary but first of all we need labor. Peace is not won by prayers. We must be strong, and to be strong we must work to create strength. Our enemies, the capitalists, should understand that they cannot take risks with our peoples."

Later, at an agricultural institute, the Soviet leader settled down for more than 90 minutes to discuss Bulgarian agricultural problems with the head of the research station, Prof. Kirl Enikov, Bulgarian Agriculture Minister Ivan Prumov and local agriculture specialists.

At one point, obviously irritated by Enikov's droning report, Khrushchev broke in to say: "You are a professor and you are used to reading lectures to students. But we are not students. We are old end experienced hands, so please excuse me if I interrupt you with questions."



SIAMESE TWINS TO UNDERGO SURGERY—Nurse Sylvia Vitri watches Siamese twins at Children's Hospital in San Francisco. The twin girls, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Lower, San Francisco, were born April 11. They are joined from the lower part of the breast bone to the navel. X-ray studies reveal separate heart and intestinal tracts and that the livers are at least partially separate. Hospital officials disclosed yesterday the twins will undergo surgery soon in the expectation that they can be separated. (AP Photofax)

13 Are Indicted In S&L Probe

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — A Montgomery County grand jury indicted 13 persons Thursday for criminal activities in connection with the operation of savings and loan institutions.

Forty-one indictments were returned. They contain a total of 101 counts. The charges carry maximum possible prison sentences of from 13 to 15 years.

The names of the accused and the indictments were withheld. Under the rules of the Circuit Court, the circuit clerk must first docket each case and issue bench warrants. Disclosure of those indicted may be made Friday.

The grand jury met for eight days before returning the indictments. It heard a total of 48 witnesses in connection with the operations of four savings and loan associations in which some 26,000 shareholders had about $14.9 million in savings.

JFK Reports

constitutional. Did the President think this nation has proceeded fast enough with its school integration program?

Kennedy said there always is some hope, in any field, that there would be more progress. He always has hopes that the progress toward equality will be faster, he said.

RAILROAD WAGE DISPUTE: Kennedy said his administration is closely watching this. "If there's anything we can do," he said, "we will do it."

STOCK MARKET: Kennedy said he could not judge why the stock market has been in a slump. All the evidence in the government's hands, he said, indicates that the country will have an excellent business year. The relationship to stock prices and the value of the securities, he added, is a matter for the judgment of the market.

MISSILE WARNING: The United States does not have warning systems against intercontinental ballistic missiles to the south of this country—as it has to the north—because the principal danger seems to be from the north, Kennedy said in reply to a question.

He said the warning net was developed against manned aircraft, which would have had to come from the north, then adapted for missiles. These, he added, would still be more likely to make the short northern flight than the long one from the south because the latter would give more time for U.S. retaliation.

The time will probably come, he said, when similar defenses are set up in the south.

PRESIDENTIAL POWER: Ex-President Dwight D. Eisenhower has said that some of the bills backed by the administration would give the President too much power. Did he wish to comment?

Kennedy said he didn't want to get into a political debate with Eisenhower. He said the ex-president had pointed to five bills, and he devoted his answer to only one bill mentioned by Eisenhower, the farm bill.

It was Kennedy's view that if this bill were defeated, it would cost the taxpayers at least $4 billion more. He said the Estes case arose from a grain-storage plan that the administration bill would correct, and he said it's his contention that those who oppose the legislation are making a vast mistake.

Reapportion Intervention Hearing Today

ANNAPOLIS (AP)— Arguments will be heard Friday whether Eastern Shore legislative candidates should be allowed to become defendants in a suit seeking to reapportion the Maryland Legislature.

Judge O. Bowie Duckett in Anne Arundel County Circuit Court granted permission May 9 to four candidates for the House, three of them incumbents, to intervene as parties defendant in the case. They are represented by two other Eastern Shore legislators, Dels. Elroy G. Boyer, D-Kent, and Richard M. Matthews, D-Dorchester.

The four who asked to be defendants are Dels. Earl Bennett, D-Dorchester, Thomas L. Merryweather, D-Dorchester, W. Paul Joiner, D-Kent, and Thomas T. Spicer, a new candidate for the House in Dorchester.

The Maryland Committee for Fair Representation filed a motion with Judge Duckett on May 12 asking him to set aside or modify the order by which he allowed the candidates to enter the suit.

Alfred L. Scanlan, committee counsel, asked that the order be voided on grounds that the committee was not given opportunity to oppose the motion and that the candidates have no standing to intervene.

Scanlan said they seek only to prolong a suit in which the court of appeals and all other parties are in agreement "that the monumental interests which confront us should be expeditiously resolved in the interests of the entire state."

He said if the legislators are allowed to remain in the suit they should be denied full standing of defendants who could cross-examine and appeal.

As defendants the legislators would be in position to wage a fullscale legal fight in the circuit and appeal any decision to higher courts.

Judge Duckett will hear arguments Monday on whether the present apportionment of legislative seats in favor of small counties is constitutional.

The suit seeks to enjoin the election of legislators in 1962 unless the General Assembly has reapportioned before November.

Gov. Tawes has said if the Circuit Court declares the present makeup of the legislature unconstitutional, he will call the assembly into special session to reapportion prior to June 1.

Woman Is Charged With Taking $40,000

BALTIMORE (AP) — A tall, blonde 33-year-old woman who was the assistant manager of a Social Security Administration credit union has been charged with embezzling more than $40,000 from it.

Miss Ella Mand of Baltimore was charged Thursday in a warrant issued by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The warrant charged her with taking the money from an organization of Bureau of Old Age and Survivors Insurance employes. The warrant contends Miss Mand set up fictitious loan accounts to obtain the $40,869 between June, 1957 and February, 1962.

Indo Troop Plane Downed, Dutch Say

HOLLANDIA Dutch New Guinea (UPI) — Dutch defense forces Thursday shot down an Indonesian plane they said was carrying paratroopers for another airdrop on Dutch West New Guinea.

It was not known if any of the 20 men believed aboard survived although some were seen scrambling into a rubber boat after the plane crashed into the sea.

The plane was shot down near Fak Fak, where Dutch forces have been fighting an estimated 120 Indonesian paratroops since their landings Monday.

Carpenter 'Not Afraid'; Says Faith Sustains Him

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) —The specter of death on the frontier of space is overshadowed for Malcolm Scott Carpenter by the great expectations.

The astronaut, 37, said several times in recent weeks as his globe-girdling orbital flight drew nearer that an abiding faith in God sustains him at all times.

He is acutely aware that a mechanical failure during his flight at 17,500 miles an hour more than 100 miles above the earth could cause his death.

"But I'm not afraid," he said during a recent interview. "You can't be afraid when you have such great expectations — what you are about to see and about to experience. It's impossible to be afraid."

Carpenter said the conquest of space is an adventure for which he is willing to sacrifice his life, if need be. He feels the risks are far outdistanced by the challenge —the chance to be a pioneer in man's exploration of the universe.

The Navy lieutenant commander's awareness that death will be riding his flanks, waiting to close in, is universal among the seven Mercury astronauts. And they agree that the millions of Americans who watch their flights on television should be prepared to witness it.

Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr., the Marine astronaut who blazed the U.S. orbital trail Feb. 20, told a congressional committee: "We do not envision every flight coming back as successfully as the three so far: there will be failures, there will be sacrifices."

Pardon Urged; Salan Weeps

PARIS (AP)—A former battlefield comrade brought a moving appeal, suggesting pardon, into the treason trial of ex-Gen. Raoul Salan Thursday. Salan wept.

Gen. Jean-Etienne Valluy, former Allied commander for central Europe, called for understanding and humility in judging Salan—captured leader of the terrorist European Secret Army Organization in Algiera.

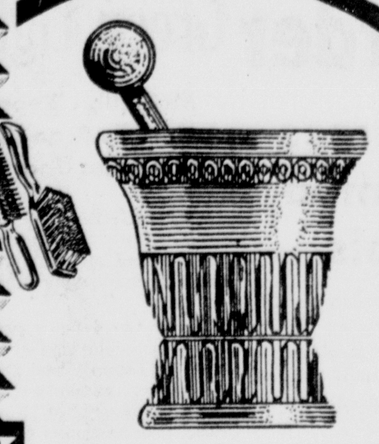
"If today some are killing with blood-stained folly," said Valluy, "perhaps it is because they were being killed. I believe that a gesture, a plea from the heart would be an element of appeasement. I believe that the people should be given proof of meekness. Others have been pardoned."

Valluy, now retired, spoke as a defense witness at the stormy third day of Salan's treason trial before the special high military court. It is generally expected that the court will sentence Salan to death for his part in the April 1961, generals' revolt in Algiers, and as the secret army leader.

Angry classes earlier between prosecution and defense attorneys threw the court into turmoil.

No...We Don't Give Stamps! Why? . . .

. . . We Are Asked Many Times For "Stamps" – By Customers . . . Our Answer Is Always The Same . . .



Let Walsh & McCagh Fill Your Next Prescription

Trading stamps cost money to the store giving them — about 3c per each $1 sales. Not much to be sure, but when the national average profit per store is only 6c per $1 the cost of stamps amounts to ½ of total yearly net profit. Inevitably then total prices in savings stamps stores must be higher to make up for the cost of the stamps.

We at Walsh-McCagh believe that our customers would rather have cash savings to spend as they wish — rather than stamps to trade in on pre-selected merchandise. That's why your money buys more at Walsh-McCagh—why your total drug prices are lower. That's the reason we say — 99 times out of 100, Walsh-McCagh will not be undersold.

So remember — 99 TIMES IN 100 — WALSH-McCAGH WON'T BE UNDERSOLD

Woman To Woman

NEW YORK (UPI) — At the typical little league game, pop pops buttons when the pride of the family slams one into the apple orchard.

Junior's so happy about the first home run that tears track down his dusty cheeks.

And what does mom do? She shares in the excitement. But many a mom of a little league player also twists a handkerchief or develops some other worrywart habit. She's concerned about the offspring's safety.

Accidents do occur. But there's balm of sorts for the worried moms in a report on injuries among 771,810 little league baseball players.

The analysis, by Dr. Creighton Hale of Little League Baseball Inc., Williamsport, Pa., puts the injury incidence at two per cent.

During the five years covered in the survey, injuries tallied 15,444, said a report to the American College of Sports Medicine.

Now is that good — or bad?

Dr. Bruce W. Everist, chairman of the Accident Prevention Committee of the American Academy of Pediatrics, answers the question this way:

"This data should be reassuring to statistically minded parents of little leaguers."

Dr. Hale reported that the great majority of injuries were of a minor nature and that the two per cent incidence was "exceptionally low in view of the great number of exposures."

From pitched balls alone, there were 148 million exposures — or chances for accidents.

"As might be expected," Dr. Hale reported, "most of the injuries were caused by the ball which is of hard construction, weighing 5¼ ounces, pitched at speeds up to 70 miles an hour and batted at speeds of approximately 85 miles an hour."

The pitched ball caused 21 per cent of the injuries; the batted ball, 19 per cent; catching, 14 per cent; thrown ball, 11 per cent; sliding, 10 per cent; collision, eight per cent; bats, four per cent; falling, four per cent; other, nine per cent.

The analysis of accident records, taken from medical reports submitted by doctors to a single insurance company which provided the accident coverage for the group of little leaguers, showed that 33 per cent of the injuries were to the head; 41 per cent to upper extremities; seven per cent to the trunk; and 19 per cent to the lower extremities.

"Approximately one-half of all the injuries . . . were found to be abrasions and contusions," Dr. Hale reported.

"In almost all such cases this type of injury was minor. The most common type of abrasion was the well known 'strawberry' resulting from sliding or falling."

Country School Receives New Lease On Life

HAGERSTOWN (AP) — Those old - fashioned country schoolhouses dotting Washington County got a new lease on life Wednesday.

The County Commissioners decided the properties should be preserved as picnic parks or recreational areas.

The policy was adopted at the request of the new Board of Parks, recently created by a special act of the legislature.

In approving the action, commission chairman Lem Kirk pointed out Washington County now has no park system. As the school properties are abandoned, he said, they will be examined by the park commission to determine their suitability for use as parks.

Park Commissioner Jacob. B. Berkson said the board has examined five abandoned school properties and found them suitable for new use.

Golf Clothes More Practical And Colorful

By WALTER LOGAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — The best-dressed athletes in the world, perhaps, are the golf pros who follow the sun from tournament to tournament on the winter circuit wearing an assortment of garments that set the styles for the duffers who are to follow.

The golfing season is upon us, Father's Day is just around the corner and the ever-resourceful sportswear manufacturers are outdoing themselves to outfit the six million American golfers who rise at the crack of dawn to make sure of getting in 18 holes.

The American Institute of Men's and Boy's Wear assures the golfer that never in history has such a practical and appealing selection of leisurewear been available for the man who plays golf despite the l-o-n-g waits at many golf courses.

Several big manufacturers this spring are producing complete matched or coordinated outfits—shirts, slacks, caps, gloves, socks and jackets to outdo even the pros.

Here is a rundown on the major golfing items, trends and best sellers:

SHIRTS —Emphasis on knit shirts which stretch, almost all of them machine washable. Fabrics run from fine wool to cotton lisle with combinations of synthetics. Raglan shoulders and solid colors in up to 24 shades most popular. New features: underarm insets and rib panels to give more freedom, extra long tails. Some have pockets on the right side so your left arm won't crush your cigarettes on the upswing.

SWEATERS—New this spring are coordinates women have known about for years: knitted shirts with matching or blending cardigan sweaters. Cardigans seem to be out-selling the old familiar pullover. Wide stripes are popular. So are solid whites in distinctive kints.

HEADGEAR — It's a tossup between hats and caps. Linen caps in solid colors still favored by many pros. Hat manufacturers have come up with even greater variety in straws and cloth. Many have distinctive bands or decorations.

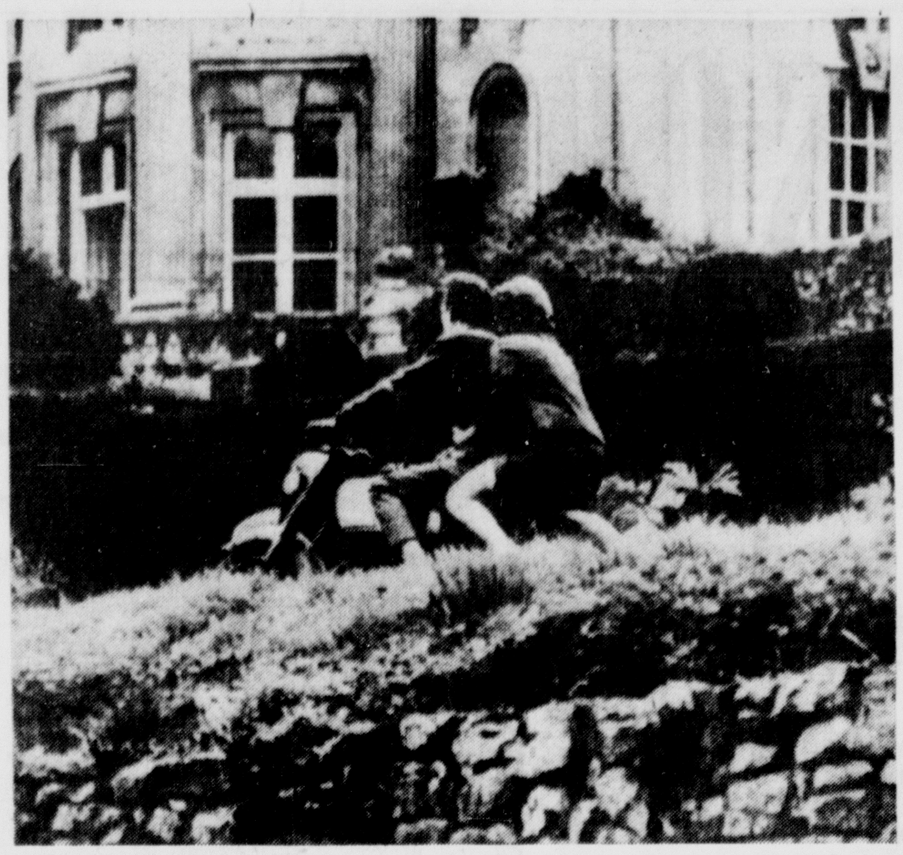
FOOTWEAR — The big news in golf shoes this spring is light weights. Many have thick crepe soles — and spikes — but the sole is lighter than anything seen before. A new color is grey but the best seller is tan.

SLACKS — Single pleats and no pleats are the big sellers in that order. Fabrics run from light wools (permanently creased) to wash and wear cotton and Dacron. Some are shower-proof. Best Seller: Button tab belts and elasticized waistbands. Shorts are similar, range up to 24 colors.

JACKETS—Almost every manufacturer uses insets of stretch nylon mesh at strategic places to give easy freedom of action. The Gary Player jacket has a yoke across the back of the shoulders that zips open for extra ventilation. McGregor has mesh insets at the shoulder that are covered when not being stretched.

Firm Buys Land

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) —Horizon Land Corp. has purchased an additional 160,000 acres of land near Holbrook, Ariz. The company will also receive mineral rights to the land, a spokesman for the company said. Horizon had also purchased 16,000 acres of land 30 miles from Phoenix.



MARGARET RIDES MOTORCYCLE—Lord Snowdon was at the controls and Princess Margaret was the passenger when this picture was taken recently near Bath, England. Scene was on the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremy Fry, friends with whom Princess Margaret and her husband were staying.

Tawes May Attend Susquehanna Parley

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Representatives from Maryland, Pennsylvania and New York will participate in a Susquehanna River conference May 28 with a view toward establishing a commission for development of the river basin.

The conference will be held at Binghamton, N.Y., under sponsorship of the New York State Joint Legislative Committee on Interstate Cooperation, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller announced here Wednesday.

Rockefeller expressed the hope that results similar to those achieved through four-state cooperation to establish the Delaware River Basin could be attained with the Susquehanna.

Govs. J. Millard Tawes of Maryland and David L. Lawrence of Pennsylvania were expected to attend the May 28 session.

Reds Following Usual Pattern In Laos

EDITOR'S NOTE — Rene-Georges Inagaki, now stationed in Tokyo, has spent much of the last two years in Laos. He has reported the repeated crisis, military and political, in that Communist-threatened jungle kingdom.

By RENE-GEORGES INAGAKI

TOKYO (AP)—Fight, talk, fight, talk.

That has been the Communist pattern in Laos for seven years.

Based on past performance and present statements, the Pathet Lao and its Communist backers in North Viet Nam and Red China now believe the time has come to talk again.

Prince Souphanouvong's Pathet Lao would like nothing better than to take over the control of all Laos at one swoop. But its leaders know this cannot be done without the great risk of direct retaliation by Western forces. So they probably will not expand their recent military success in northwestern Laos into a general offensive.

This is particularly so since the United States is moving into adjoining Thailand with a combat force of about 5,000 men and planes.

Sudden Pathet Lao thrusts, backed by the North Vietnamese, have thrown the royal Laotian army into panic several times in the past. The attacks have always been local and unexploited.

Last week while the royal army and the population at Houei Sai fled pell mell across the Mekong River to Thailand, the pursuing force, though virtually unopposed, never attempted to go into the border town.

The Pathet Lao may do so at a later date, but so far it has avoided taking any town along the Mekong, where the river forms the border with Thailand, because of possible intervention by the United States or the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.

With the capture of Muong Sing and Nam Tha, the pro-Communists have cleared northwestern Laos of royal army resistance and once again made their point—that the government had better resume talks.

Sperry Gets Contract

GREAT NECK, N. Y. (UPI) — Sperry Gyroscope Co., a division of Sperry Rand Corp., has received a $900,000 contract from the autonetics division of North American Aviation to produce stable platforms for the Air Force Minuteman missile's airborne guidance system.

Business Activity Declines Slightly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that business activity throughout the nation advanced by $6 billion in the first three months of 1962—considerably below gains in the preceding three quarters.

The department estimated total spending for goods and services in January and March reached a record annual rate of $548.3 billion. This represented a minor revision from an earlier estimate of $549 billion.

Going Abroad? Better Check Your Insurance

By RALPH VILLERS

NEW YORK (UPI)—Few people think about their insurance while traveling until they reach the flight coverage counter at the airport—and planning like that is about on a par with going to Paris in summer without a hotel reservation.

Don Johnson, a Columbus Ohio insurance executive who also is a seasoned traveler, said it's best to start checking out coverage at the same time the itinerary is decided because "it avoids any last-minute emergency."

Johnson, who is vice president-underwriting of Nationwide Insurance Co., cited the example of a recent seven-week around-the-world trip. He planned to go entirely by plane.

But before he got back to Columbus he had traveled by car in Malaya, taken an unexpected 250-mile train ride in India and used a boat in Australia. If he had settled for only flight insurance—instead of additional accident and common carrier coverage—he and his family would have been unprotected in event of his injury or death while traveling on the ground or water.

With his knowledge of policies and of all the unexpected things that can happen while on pleasure or business travel, Johnson suggested a few general guides to people planning vacations.

Generally, he said check over all your policies—auto, fire life health accident — to find who, what and where is insured. Especially ascertain that all premiums are paid up for the time you are away to avoid cancellation of coverage.

"If you're going to take your family along with you, you want to be sure your health insurance covers the family, not just the head of the family," he said.

For usual vacation trips, Johnson pointed out health insurance covers the insured even out of the country. But for someone planning a prolonged trip — say around the world or for nine to 10 months — the insurance company should be notified in advance. The reason is that risks of prolonged absences are not contemplated by the average policy and coverage might be endangered.

Most auto insurance policies cover the motorist anywhere in this country or Canada, but Johnson said be sure to carry a policy identification card along. And for Canada he advises taking proof of insurance along because some provinces have impounding statutes, which could tie up a car after an accident.

Most auto policies have limitations on Mexico. Johnson, and the Mexican government, advise checking representatives of Mexican companies in the border towns.

As for driving in Europe, he pointed out that American Automobile Association members can arrange for coverage by a London firm at their local club before leaving home. Car rental agencies in Europe also can arrange protection.

"And," Johnson added "for goodness sake drive with care in Europe, there's nothing so inconvenient as an auto accident in a foreign country."

To clear up any fears about foreign travel, Johnson noted that life insurance has no geographic limitation — it's in force everywhere.

Home fire protection policies remain in effect while you are vacationing, if premiums are paid. But Johnson advises, "Check your policy for vacancy provisions if you intend to be gone for more than two months." Prolonged absences could, under vacancy provisions, void a policy in some states.

Also, he pointed out most home protection policies insist on "ordinary precautions" by the owner during his absence, like maintaining heat and preventing pipes from freezing in cold weather.

BIRTHDAY VISIT—Mrs. Amanda Stephenson (left) celebrated her 104th birthday this week at Kingsport, Tenn. She was visited by her younger sister, Mrs. Betty Stephenson, of Johnson City, who is only 102 years old. The sisters married brothers and both "suppose we could be called senior citizens." Cost Of Joining Pleasure Boating Fraternity Varies

By JACK WOLISTON

A large number of persons are interested in joining the growing fraternity of pleasure boaters but usually are deterred by the big question: "What's it going to cost?"

Unfortunately, it is difficult to answer with any specific figures because so many factors are involved: type of boat, power, equipment, insurance, length of season, amount of cruising, dockage, storage, etc.

In the inboard field where boats in the 24 to 26 foot range probably are most popular, one manufacturer (Owens) has come up with some figures which he believes are typical for most sections of the country.

The manufacturer estimates that an average family of four with an annual income of $7,500 can afford to own and maintain an inboard cruiser costing approximately $5,000.

Purchase would be on the time-payment plan, a method of financing as popular now in the boating field as in the auto industry. After a down payment of 25 per cent, or approximately $1,250, the balance would be paid off at about $90 a month over a five-year period.

Overall annual expense for this size boat, the manufacturer estimates, would be $550 to $650, which would include insurance, dockage, general mainteance, storage, and gas and oil for an average season's cruising.

Depreciation on a well-built boat, properly maintained, is not an important factor, according to the manufacturer, who says that a boat costing $5,000 still has a market value of $3,000 after 10 years of use.

It is more difficult to pinpoint costs in the outboard field, where boats, without power, range from about $50 for an 8-foot pram up to $2,500 or more for an 18-foot or longer craft luxuriously outfitted. Motors range in horsepower from about 1.7 up to 100 and cost anywhere from $60 to $1,200, depending on shipping costs.

A recent statistical report in The Boating Industry magazine said the average cost to a consumer in 1961 for a new boat was $597, for a new outboard motor $458, and for a new trailer $228—a total average outlay of $1,283. Add to this, of course, the overall annual expense for operation, insurance, maintenance, etc., which probably would tack on at least another $300.

Anyone contemplating purchase of a boat would do well to get a copy of the annual Boat Owners Buyers Guide, a catalog-directory of the pleasure boat field which is available on the newsstands. It lists specific prices and specifications of all new boats, engines, trailers, equipment, supplies and services.

Courses Involving Use Of Teaching Machine Principle Offered By Churches

By CLAIRE COX

NEW YORK (UPI)—The teaching machine is going to church.

Religious bodies, ever interested in keeping up with the times, have been using movies, hi-fi, closed-circuit television and other modern educational devices. Now they are beginning to offer courses involving use of the teaching machine principle.

To help them on their way, Association Press, the YMCA's publishing division, has prepared an experimental book that works like a teaching machine.

The first in a series of "step-by-step" books, the initial publication is entitled "Step by Step in Theology," which will appear next week. In the fall, Association Press will issue a step-by-step program for teaching the Old Testament and another dealing with the functioning of boards and committees.

"Religious education leaders have been asking for new kinds of materials with which to teach," a spokesman for Association Press said. "This kind of material seems to answer their needs, for it has been useful in schools."

This first book, prepared by Hal and Jean Vermes, programming experts, is based on "First Steps in Theology," by the Rev. Dr. Jack Finnegan, of the Berkeley Divinity School. It offers a basic, logical sequence aimed at producing "clear ideas and understanding of The Church, Jesus Christ and God."

"Step by Step in Theology" is described by the publisher as a book with "a kind of built-in instructor." In going through the book the first time, the right-hand pages are studied, while the left-hand pages are upside down. Each page is divided into eight frames, four large and four small. The large frames pose questions, which are answered in the small frames on the next page. The frames are labelled vertically A, B, C and D. The student goes through all the A frames in the book on the right-hand pages and then turns the book over and goes through the similarly marked frames on the rest of the pages.

The book was put together this way to provide the teaching machine effect. For example, the first frame, on page 13, says, "The universe is made up, in ascending order, of the inorganic, the organic, the conscious, the self-conscious, and the personal. The highest thing we know of in the universe is that which is——."

The answer, on page 14, is "personal."

This is regarded as a basic, simple question. From there, the statements progress until the final statement, involving comments of Jesus at Passover.

Books based on this concept of teaching have been published for use in public schools, but Association Press said this is the first to deal with religious education. It was prepared basically for Sunday School teachers of junior and senior high school groups and young adults, but it is hoped that the pupils will want to use it at home to prepare for class discussions.

"This programmed learning, or programed instruction, book works like a teaching machine," the publisher said. "The text leaves something for the reader to do, at his own individual pace, each step of the way."

Because this kind of instruction is still in the experimental stage, the publisher has included as part of the book pages containing blanks to be filled out and sent to Association Press indicating the success or failure of the method.

Focus On Health

By The Associated Press

A look at a special doctor with a small practice, and some summertime warnings are subjects with a Focus on Health:

Dr. Astronaut

William Kennedy Douglas is a doctor. At the age of 39, he has only seven patients. But they are seven very unusual patients.

Dr. Douglas is physician for the U.S. astronauts, and an expert in the manned space flight program.

He readied John H. Glenn Jr., for the first flight of an American around the earth. He watched the health of astronaut Donald K. Slayton who missed his turn for the second orbital flight because of a heart beat irregularity.

And now he is readying Malcolm Scott Carpenter to take Slayton's place atop the huge Atlas rocket, for the second orbital attempt, perhaps this week.

Some of Dr. Douglas' guidelines for health and physical fitness are interesting. In an interview in the magazine "Medical World News," Dr. Douglas explained that he let the astronauts choose their own exercise.

"Carpenter likes working out in the gym; Slayton plays handball; Glenn is famous for his running," Dr. Douglas said.

"Frankly, I think this is the best way to prescribe any regimen necessary for health. Let the patient choose; because if it is his own choice he does it with enthusiasm, and in the end benefits far more than he would by any other means."

Being doctor to space pioneers isn't all doctoring by any means. Some of it is learning from the astronauts' experiences. For instance, Dr. Douglas explained in the article, it was the astronauts who came up with the perfect term for describing the direction of gravity forces on the human body, a term now accepted in aviation medicine. In their words, it was simple and graphic: "Eyeballs in, or eyeballs out."

Summertime Warning

Bicycle riders—now that summer's here—take care, says the American Academy of Pediatrics' committee on accident prevention.

Ride your bike with the traffic, not against it. Don't ride bikes after dark. If you do, use a headlight up front, a red reflector behind, and carry a bell or horn.

Don't ride double, since it cuts down on road visibility and makes balance more difficult. No stunts, keep your hands on the handle bars. Don't hitch rides on other vehicles. Use hand and arm signals for turns and stops. Don't ride when tired, and don't ride too fast.

Maryland News In Brief

BALTIMORE (AP) — Herbert R. O'Conor Jr., 38-year-old campaign manager for Gov. Tawes, has recovered sufficiently from an automobile accident to be moved to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

O'Conor was brought to the Baltimore hospital Wednesday from Physicians' Memorial Hospital in La Plata. The Baltimorean had been a patient there since he suffered a severe concussion in a collision Sunday on rain-slicked Maryland 5 near Waldorf, Charles County.

O'Conor is the son of a former Maryland governor and U.S. senator.

HAGERSTOWN (AP)—John E. Chubb of Philadelphia, assistant manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad's Philadelphia Region, says payment to employes for work not performed should not be called "featherbedding" because this implies the employe is at fault.

In an address to the Hagerstown Traffic Club Wednesday night, Chubb said:

"Usually, this is not the case, for there are many thousands of good, conscientious individuals. . . who simply are bound by antiquated labor contracts. . ."

BALTIMORE (AP) — Officials posted a notice at Social Security headquarters in suburban Woodlawn Thursday assuring employes that their credit union funds are insured.

The notice said credit union officials were told of a fund shortage of $40,000 by a woman now being questioned by the FBI. Charles Born, the credit union manager, said the missing money was "borrowed" from fictitious accounts.

The FBI said Thursday no arrests have been made in the case.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — One of the youngest winners in Maryland's primary elections is a University of Maryland co-ed who spent only $680 on her campaign.

Miss Nancy Brown, 22, of Coloro, Cecil County, won Democratic nomination for the House of Delegates in unofficial returns from Tuesday's balloting. Miss Brown said she didn't begin campaigning until May 1 and spent most of her time trying to convince voters she was mature enough to hold office.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Newton Steers, Republican nominee for congressman-at-large and an individual complainant in reapportionment and unit vote suits, promised Thursday to continue a fight "for fair and equitable voting rights."

Steers made the promise in a post-election statement. In a news conference, the Republican nominee for governor — Frank Small Jr. — urged Democrats to help streamline the state government by crossing party lines and voting for him and his GOP running mates.

OCEAN CITY, Md. (AP) — Ocean City Mayor Hugh Cropper Jr. made it clear Thursday that Maryland's summer resort town won't be dropping its color bar this season.

The Civic Interest Group of Maryland, an integrationist organization, had asked the mayor to determine which businesses were integrated. Earlier, the CIG also had threatened to demonstrate at Ocean City this summee if segregation of facilities persisted.

WESTMINSTER, Md. (AP) — Methodist Bishop John Wesley Lord of the Washington area will be commencement speaker at Western Maryland, a Methodist college, June 4.

College President Lowell S. Ensor said the speaker at baccalaureate services June 3 would be the Rev. John B. Warman of Pittsburgh, Pa. June 2 is Alumni Day on the Western Maryland campus.

HYATTSVILLE, Md. (AP) — A 14-year-old boy was fatally injured Thursday when struck by a car as he was crossing George Palmer Highway on his way to Kent Junior High School in Palmer Park, near here.

John Gary Greenlun of Kentland, ran across the highway about one half mile from his home and into the path of the car, Police Pvt. Samuel Seger said.

No charges were filed against the driver.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Robert C. Weaver, head of the Housing Home and Finance Agency in Washington, will address the 95th annual commencement exercises at Morgan State College June 4.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Truck drivers from four states will maneuver their big rigs with precision next month in competing in the annual Mid-Atlantic Regional Truck Roadeo.

Drivers from 50 trucking companies in Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey are expected to take part in the event June 29-30 at the suburban Eastpoint shopping center.

Catalyst Developed

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Socony Mobil Oil Co. announced Thursday it is producing commercially a new cracking catalyst described as having outstanding advantages over commercial catalysts now used in petroleum refining.

The new catalyst, called Durabead 5, was developed at the company's Paulsboro, N. J., laboratory. It was described at a session of the 27th midyear meeting of the American Petroleum Institute's refining division.

Job Placements In Md. Up Sharply Last Month

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Employment Security Department said Thursday 30.3 per cent more workers were placed in non-farm occupations last month than during April.

The total number of placements by the Maryland State Employment Service climbed 25.1 per cent over March and resulted in 7,370 jobs being filled throughout the state.

Stephen C. Cromwell, executive director of the department, said the general improvement was due to increased activity in the construction, automotive and shipbuilding industries. In addition, the beverage and ice cream industries have begun seasonal expansion.

State Education Board Vetoes School Merger

BALTIMORE (AP) — The State Board of Education has ruled that Taneytown High School in Carroll County should not be consolidated with Francis Scott Key High School.

The seven-member board voted unanimously late Wednesday against the consolidation proposed by the county board of education. The county board, it said, did not present its findings to the public between taking a vote in September, 1961, and holding a public hearing in November.

The state board said its reversal "in no sense constitutes a substitution of the judgment" of the state board for the county board.

Taneytown residents asked that the consolidation be reversed when they were given a hearing before the state board last March. They said their town of 2,000 population, second largest in the county, deserved its own high school.

It was the first appeal of a proposed school merger to the state board in 20 years. Consolidation would have sent Taneytown High students six miles south to the Francis Scott Key school at Union Bridge.

Only last week, the Carroll County school board announced it was postponing any consolidation until September of 1963 because the state board had not acted on the appeal. Officials said teachers had to be assigned now for next fall.

Going To California? Get A Wagon, They Said

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Moving to California? Here are a few tips culled from a government report:

"Immigrants . . . should furnish themselves (if a family of five or six persons) with one good wagon, four or five yoke of oxen, three or four cows, three horses, and to each person two hundred and fifty pounds of flour, one hundred and fifty pounds of bacon, thirty pounds of coffee, fifty pounds of sugar, twenty pounds of rice, two good blankets and a few cooking utensils.

"Every male person over fourteen years of age should have one good rifle, ten pounds of powder, thirty pounds of lead, two thousand percussion caps and a good horse.

"On arriving on the banks of the Sacramento and finding a convenient piece of land that the immigrant can occupy, he should begin sowing wheat from December to February; beans, peas and corn in April or May; and should also procure himself cows two years old, worth from four to five dollars; young bulls at two or three dollars; thirty or forty mares at five or six dollars, a stallion at fifteen or twenty dollars, and a few sheep at two dollars each. One hundred cows will produce from seventy to ninety calves between the 2d and 12th months. From $1,000 to $1,500 in cash will start an enterprising man in breeding animals for a California farm."

The report was made by Thomas O. Larkin, U.S. Consul at Monterey, to the Secretary of State in 1845—three years before gold was discovered and five years before California was admitted to the Union.

Ann Landers . . .

Dear Ann Landers: Since your column seems to be a clearing house for soul barers, I'd like to add my confession. Maybe someone will learn from it. Perhaps just getting it down on paper will make me feel better.

I was married to a fine man, but I craved a little excitement beyond the ordinary duties of home and family. So I went back to work after 15 years.

I was flattered by the attentions of one of the big wheels in the office. I found myself dressing fit to kill every day. I even darkened the gray out of my hair. And then I became involved in a full-blown affair with a fascinating smoothie who was five years my junior.

At first the romance was like a tonic. I felt rejuvenated and attractive again. It was as if the calendar had been turned back 15 years. But believe me the heartache and torture wasn't worth it. Now I feel twice as old and far more miserable than if no one had ever looked at me.

I found out after two years of being blind fool that the Love Affair of the century was being sandwiched in between three others. Women were his hobby. The louse had girl friends all over the building.

I am loaded with guilt and remorse and filled with fear that my Cassanova may pass the word to his associates. But worse of all I'm ashamed for having been such a dumbbell.

Thanks for letting me get this off my chest.—BRAINLESS

Dear Ann Landers: Our neighbors have a seven-foot hedge down their property line. Their house is on the corner so the hedge constitutes a traffic hazard. Cars turning from our street into the street which is parallel to the hedge can't see the oncoming cars.

We called the police to report this danger. Their answer was: "The people own the property and they have a right to erect a seven foot concrete wall on it if they want to."

We even went to these neighbors and asked them to clip the hedge down a few feet in the interest of safety. The woman replied that the hedge helps reduce the noise from the street and it need not be a traffic hazard if people are careful. What do we do now?—PORTLAND

Dear Portland: Now you do nothing but wait for the big crash — and hope it isn't someone dear to you. Unhappily, similar hazards are found in many places. Usually it takes a tragic accident to produce action. The people who wouldn't cooperate are heartsick, and the law moves in and insists on removal of the hazard.

Dear Ann Landers: Your letter from "Constant Cook" made me laugh. This woman complains because her husband comes home for lunch. I wonder what she'd do if she had to cook for my crew.

I'm a farmer's wife. I prepare three large meals every day, plus an evening snack. Besides my husband and four children there's an assortment of hired hands. During the planting and harvesting months, the number of place-settings goes up to twelve.

Cooking for farm hands would drive the average woman nuts. There are hay-boys who don't like vegetables, middle-aged men with touchy stomachs and grandpas who are minus half their teeth.

But I get a kick out of meals because of the interesting conversation. The men talk about the sick cow, and how her personality has changed, whether the storm hurt the crops and how much the hogs ought to bring at market. It makes all the work worthwhile.

I was going to sign this "Another Constant Cook" but I think instead I'll sign it — LUCKY FARMER'S WIFE

Are you tempted to smoke because the crowd does? If so, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Teenage Smoking," enclosing with your request ten cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Rugs On Streets Are Traffic Hazard In Pakistan

By JOHN BARTON

KARACHI, Pakistan (UPI) — Most merchants of the world are proud of the paved stress that lead customers to their stores, but Pakistan shop owners go one step further. They often cover busy downtown streets with costly oriental rugs.

The unsuspecting motorist can be completely unnerved when he turns at a crowded intersection and is suddenly faced by a block of handwoven rugs strewn over the road.

All his efforts to avoid running over them will be in vain, too. The rugs usually are laid out in such a manner that even the best driver is bound to hit a few.

If the motorist looks in his rear view mirror expecting to see an irate rug maker shaking his fist and chasing after him, however, chances are he's in for a surprise. He'll probably see a smiling merchant waving a hearty greeting and shouting "thank you."

FOR THE rug dealers of Pakistan are perfectly willing to let their rugs become traffic victims —and the heavier the car the better.

These masters of a carpet craft that dates back more than 500,000 years have learned that running cars over rugs actually increases the value and life span of the carpet.

By running heavy cars over brand new rugs — an action which seems to affect the driver more adversely than the rugs — the fibers of the rugs are compressed. When rug dealers later rescue their wares from the busy streets, the rugs are cleaned and a more valuable carpet is ready for sale.

The carpet craft that flourishes today in modern Pakistan dates back to the pre-historic era of more than half a million years ago.

THE EXACT origin of rugs known as Ghilim has never been determined, but it is known they were originally made by the most primitive methods of hand spining and dyeing wool.

As the Ghilim craft was handed down from generation to generation new designs evolved. However, authentic Ghilim carpets are distinguished by their geometrical designs and rich lustres of vegetable dyes.

The hardy people of the middle Indus valley developed a woven carpet known as Ghaleens which differs only slightly from Ghilims. Ghaleens are made of short staple wool, and are thicker and less ornate than Ghilims. Their designs are restricted to identical geometrical or floral patterns at two opposite corners, with a few having matching geometrical designs at the center also.

LEATHER carpets, still popular today, probably were in vogue in Pakistan even in the stone age, when man, who hunted for food with improvised stone implements learned to save the skin.

Leather carpets, usually made of deerskin, are specially tanned to make the leather soft, and dyed in rich colours, and embroidered with multicolored thread.

Unlike other carpets which are mostly man-made, Baluchistan carpets are exclusively made by women in their spare time.

Word passes around villages swiftly if someone is ready to make a carpet. Neighbors, and relatives all help in the process, which is accompanied by gossiping, story-telling and tea drinking. This is an integral part of the carpet making routine. It serves the same or modern bridge clubs serve for Western women.

Supreme Court Decision On Prayer In Schools Will Have Far-Reaching Effects

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

An historic decision that could affect religious practices in approximately half the nation's public schools is pending before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Specifically, the question involved is whether it is legal for children in schools at New Hyde Park, N.Y., to recite this 22-word prayer:

"Almighty God, we acknowledge our dependence upon Thee, and we beg Thy blessings upon us, our parents, our teachers, and our country."

If such a prayer, designed to be completely nonsectarian, is ruled unlawful, it could open the way for eliminating all prayers from the public schools.

It is the first time the high tribunal has undertaken a ruling on the question.

Studies have indicated that prayers of some kind are used regularly in public schools in about 33 per cent of the nation's communities, and occasionally in another 17 per cent.

In other words, prayers are evidently used sometimes in about half the country's 117,855 public schools—of about 58,927 of them. Twenty-four states expressly permit it or require it. It is widespread elsewhere, at local discretion.

In New York, the State Board of Regents drafted the nonsectarian invocation, to be used at the option of local communities, hoping to minimize conflict.

An estimated 10 to 15 per cent of the schools in the state, not including the big New York City school system, use the prayer. Children may be excused from taking part.

In the test case, 19 other states have filed briefs, supporting constitutionality of the practice, and saying that to prohibit it would have far-reaching consequences across the nation.

The prayer is as nonsectarian as Irving Berlin's "God Bless America," says the Roman Catholic weekly, America, backing its use. "It is imposed on no one."

Similarly, the National Association of Evangelicals declared the constitutional principle of church-state separation was not meant to exclude such practices as school prayer and Bible reading, and that to assume it does plays into the hands of irreligion and atheism.

However, Rabbi Philip Hiat, executive secretary of the Synagogue Council of America, said there is no such thing as a nonsectarian prayer and that it cheapens prayer to try to make it so.

Going To South America? Brasilia, The World's Most Modern Capital City, Is Worth Visiting

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP
United Press International

The 20th Century has been an era on planned cities — New Delhi, Canberra, Chandigarh, Islamabad — but Brasilia is the most ambitious project of them all and the one with the most dubious future. For the well-traveled tourist the new capital of Brazil is a "must," ranking as the eighth wonder of the modern world.

Brasilia, created by former President Juscelino Kubitschek to fulfill a campaign promise, is either Brazil's greatest folly ir its greatest glory. It is only five years old and another decade or so will provide the answer. Almost all work on its construction has come to a halt.

There are a number of reasons why the future of this city of 80,000 is dark. It cost Brazil more than $1 billion to get it started—money borrowed from many different sources and literally manufactured at the mint. It has helped bring the biggest and the richest country in South America to the brink of financial disaster. The present government does not seem interested in risking more money on its construction.

The idea of moving the capital — and eventually industry — to the more temperate interior of Brazil from huimd Ri de Janeiro on the coast has been a Brazilian dream for 150 years. But few government bigwigs or their wives want to leave their luxurious Rio life to live in a city without beaches, clubs and nightlife.

Most travellers take in Brasilia as a flying, one-day side trip from Rio or Sao Paulo, but you can fly there from New York by Varig Airlines on Wednesdays.

The first view of Brasilia, 580 miles northwest of Rio, is a thrilling one. Its vast outline, patterned with a sweeping network of thruways and accented by scattered nuclei of tall buildings, is imposed on the scrubby Gioas highlands, a plateau so sweeping in its immensity that the curve of the earth seems apparent on the horizon.

It's a good idea to start your sightseeing in the teeming shanty town that housed the city's pioneer residents — the construction workers. This scab on the face of the world's most modern city is gradually being torn away, but its Wild West appearance still has a certain picturesqueness.

Not let your guide drive you into the city, via cloverleaves and underpasses that completely eliminate the old-fashioned intersection.

The main attraction is the Plaza of the Three Powers, the focal point of architect Oscar Niemeyer's much-photographed government buildings which look like a preview of the 1964 New York World's Fair.

First soldier to give his life in the Spanish-American War was Burton Meek, who is buried at Clyde, Ohio.

CUF Agency Report Given By Physician

Over $16,000 was handed to citizens of Allegany County and nearby Mineral County, W. Va. last year by the Health and Research Services Foundation of County United Fund.

The sum provided essential drugs, treatments and appliances, braces, special nursing care and hospitalization for CUF area citizens who could not meet their own needs or who found community resources inadequate.

Dr. A. J. Mirkin, president of the CUF agency last year, said assistance was extended on a non-categorical basis, regardless of the disease or condition.

"For instance," the physician noted," 26 heart patients, 11 persons afflicted with cancer, two with polio, and seven with mental illness were among the recipients of direct aid."

Persons afflicted with other ailments also received ready aid. In all, the Health and Research Services Foundation opened 118 cases; continued nine from 1960 and referred 10 others to government agencies.

The Appalachian Trail was once called "one of the seven wonders of the outdoorsman's world." The 2,050-mile footpath stretches from Maine to Georgia.

Gunman Robs Baltimore S&L Firm Of $5,000

BALTIMORE (AP) — A short and stocky gunman, unshaven and in shirt sleeves, robbed the Calvert Savings and Loan Association of about $5,000 Thursday.

Five women clerks and cashiers were at work when the bandit entered the downtown office and ordered them: "Everyone sit down and face me."

Then he told the cashier, Mrs. Gloria Hartman, to produce the office money, scooping the $4,889 from two cash drawers.

"Now, everyone turn around in your chairs," he said, before he ran outside and fled north on Calvert Street.

Marvin D. Rosenthal, company vice president, was in a rear office, unaware of the holdup until one of the clerks telephoned him from the front office. Rosenthal called police.

There were no customers in the office at the time of the holdup.

The women employes told police and FBI agents they recognized the bandit as a man who had been at the office last week to change a $5 bill.

They described him as about 45 wearing a tan straw hat with multi-colored band, and a blue shirt. He carried a small, gray plastic portfolio.

30-Year Plaque Presented

The American Casualty Company of Reading, Pa., honored the Conlon Insurance Agency at a luncheon here in recognition of being a representative of the firm for the past 30 years, the first contract being set up in February 1932. Thomas F. Conlon Sr., second from right, is shown receiving a plaque from Robert Lane, manager of the Pittsburgh office. Others in the picture are James L. Conlon, left, partner in the local insurance agency business, and Thomas G. Harmon, Altoona, production manager. Thomas F. Conlon Jr. is in partnership with his brother, James. Miss Regina Santesanio is an employe of the agency.

Radiation Levels Up In West Va.

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)— The State Health Department reports that radiation levels in West Virginia have run above normal for the past week but "are considerably below levels previously expected for this period."

A department spokesman said data obtained from the department's radiological air-monitoring station atop the state parking building near the capitol indicated levels were somewhat higher than the normal but were still well within acceptable levels.

The station began full-time operations last week to measure radiation levels. The measurement is made in micro-microcuries, or the radiation in one gram of radium. Readings for the period beginning last Wednesday were:

May 9, 4.1 micro-microcuries; May 10, 4.8; May 11, 8.2; May 14, 4.6 and May 15, 7.9.

The department said, "Although these levels are above those normally expected from background radiation, they are well within the range for routine surveillance as defined by the Federal Radiation Council.

Heisey Honored By Sentinel

The final edition of this year's Sentinel, Fort Hill High School's newspaper, is dedicated to Victor D. Heisey, principal who will retire in June.

In addition, the newspaper's staff selected him as "outstanding boy of the year."

Heisey has been Fort Hill's only principal, serving since its doors were first opened in the fall of 1936. Prior to that he was principal of Fort Hill's predecessor, Penn Avenue High School, from the time it was opened until Fort Hill was ready for occupancy.

The final edition just off the press Wednesday contains Heisey's formal letter of resignation to the Board of Education in which he stated "It is with reluctance and with a lump in my throat that I come to the end of the road of my public service as a school master."

But, he pointed out that pension laws have been enacted that indicated a desire on the part of the public not to run the risk of inefficiency because of old age in the administration of its public school program. He also expressed a personal desire to be able to devote more time to projects which he has waited for years to undertake and when there is not the pressure of running a large high school.

Forty-three years of public education will come to an end for Heisey, who has also been a civic and church leader in the city.

Graduating in 1915 from Schuylkill Haven High School, he received his bachelor's degree four years later from Albright College.

He taught three years at Clearfield, Pa., and one year at Steelton before going to Rothsville in 1924.

Heisey holds the distinction of having been principal of three high schools at the time of their first graduating classes, Rothsville in 1924; Pennsylvania Avenue, in 1928, and Fort Hill in 1937.

One of Heisey's main goals at Penn Avenue was acquiring membership in the Association of Colleges and Secondary School of the Middle Atlantic States. The entire program of a school must be of high calibre to meet the requirements.

When he took over at Penn Avenue High School in 1927, the school had no library, so he built one from nothing, pushing it to the point today where Fort Hill's library has 7,000 books.

An athletic program was instituted and in fact, Heisey and some of the basketball players broke concrete and stones to help install showers.

He saw to it that the first graduating class had a yearbook, and in 1932, the first football team was formed.

By 1931, however, academic plant and program facilities had been enacted so that the school became a member of the ACSS MAS. Penn Avenue retained its membership as long as it was a high school, and Fort Hill has been in it constantly since 1936.

Heisey's feeling has been that a school is like a community and its affairs are conducted in a similar manner.

"In our retirement," Heisey said, "my wife and I are going to enjoy living, traveling with a trip abroad scheduled next year."

They have one son, Robert, an assistant professor of music at the New York University junior college at Middletown, N.Y. Robert is married to the former Dorothy Todd of Middletown and the couple has one daughter, Cheryl Lynn.

Heisey has been associated with Boy Scout work for many years, serving as first president of Potomac Council when it was organized in two Maryland counties and four West Virginia counties in 1936.

He has been a member of the Cumberland Rotary Club, was a director for four years and president in 1933. He was also a member of the Board of directors of Central YMCA for many years.

A former Sunday school teacher at First Presbyterian Church, Heisey is a member of the church session.

He has been president of Allegany County Teachers Association and was chairman of the Athletic Committee of Maryland State Principals Association.

He was elected to serve as the president of the Cumberland Valley Athletic Association when it was reorganized in 1956.

Social Workers Hear Talk By James S. Getty

Cooperation between social, welfare, health and public agencies was lauded by James S. Getty, state's attorney, as he addressed a luncheon meeting of the Allegany County Social Workers at Sheehe's Restaurant this week.

Mr. Getty said the state's attorney is legal officer to the courts and to all state agencies. He cited cases involving unemployment compensation, welfare payments, allowances to dependents and responsibilities of children to destitute parents.

Mr. Getty praised the work of the various agencies and the lower courts. He said few people realize how much is done by the various state, county and local agencies and how many problems present themselves in a single day.

He said Juvenile Court and Trial Magistrates Court, both in the Union Street Building where his office is located, are among the busiest places in the county. These lower courts, he commented, are the only courts most people ever experience.

Court Status

In reply to a question as to whether or not Juvenile Court should be elevated to Circuit Court status and whether Trial Magistrate Court should be elevated to Peoples or Municipal Court, Mr. Getty suggested that as long as the lower courts render proper service there is no need for a change. On the other hand, he pointed out, there are some arguments in favor of elevation.

The major drawback, he commented, is time. The lower courts can cut legal delay and red tape to a minimum and keep costs to the individual to a "near nothing" level.

Referrals Discussed

Mr. Getty talked briefly about referrals, and said he agrees with a program of referral by one agency to another, if needs can be met better by an agency where the problem really belongs. He said most of the agencies resolve problems without recourse to law, but when they don't or can't, his office is ready to lend a hand, if that is desired.

The speaker was introduced by Magistrate F. Allan Weatherholt, who serves as chairman to the group.

A report was made by a committee working on the problem of referrals and it was proposed by the committee that a catalogue or booklet be prepared, listing the agencies in the county and outlining their responsibilities and services. This book would be distributed to all agencies and interested people, thus saving time and providing ready data for reference when a problem arises.

Mrs. Ora Mae Lewis of the Allegany-Garrett Heart Association and Mrs. Jennie Grahame of the Health Department said their agencies are working on such booklets now.

The committee report was made by Walter R. Campbell, manager of the office of Social Security, a member of the referral committee.

Who's Going To Bury Us?

Russia is not going to bury us by outstripping the U. S. in production of goods, despite Khrushchev's threats. So says Prof. G. Warren Nutter, who has compiled an exhaustive report on the growth of industrial production in the Soviet Union for the National Bureau of Economic Research.

Russian production is so low and that of the U. S. is so high that comparisons of growth percentages are meaningless.

The real test is in measures of physical output. Here, he found, the already wide gap between the volume of Russia and our own is steadily widening.

As a matter of fact, the professor says, the annual rate of economic growth in Russia now is lower than it was in the time of the czars. In 1913 Russia's production was equal to ours in 1884 (29 years earlier) and in 1955 it was at a level the U. S. had reached in 1920 (35 years earlier). The professor says the Reds continue to lag farther behind than in czarist days.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

The War In Laos

I am used to calling it French Indo-China, which it was in the days when I lived in the Far East and a lively town Saigon was. Today, it is all divided up into Laos, North Vietnam and South Vietnam, but the division is part of the grand design of Red China to reach the Bay of Bengal.

The principal error in Western thinking about Red China is that the Westerner fails to recognize that just as Soviet Russia set out to conquer the world, so Red China plans to expand China to the Chienlung Line which means, in Southeast Asia, that its actual territorial control would have a line from Turkestan to the Bay of Bengal. Furthermore, Red China is much concerned over its rice supply and whenever it can add rice lands to its own territory, it achieves an enormous victory. Therefore the surprise in Washington that the Red Chinese should have sent forces to participate in the Laos war is shocking to anyone familiar with the Far East. Old French Indo-China lies on the borders of Red China and is closely associated with the provinces of Kweichow and Yunnan. In Yunnan particularly, the peoples are very mixed and some are very close to those of French Indo-China, now called Laos and Vietnam. It is impossible to draw an absolute ethnological line in border territory.

As the Red Chinese plan is to reach the Bay of Bengal and to include in China all the territory east of it, it should have been presumed by our experts that sooner or later, they would intervene in any situation which imperilled their hegemony over this area.

Therefore, the disarmament talks in Geneva were a foregone, futile effort because it is the Red Chinese who are not planning disarmament but who are planning imperial expansion at any cost. The Chinese have always called their country, Chung Kuo, the Middle Kingdom. Even Dr. Sun Yat-sen's republican government continued the name, but added the word Republic to it, in a word, the Republic of the Middle Kingdom.

What was actually meant was that China is the center of the universe and that all the rest of the world would have to become satellites to it.

The famous letter of Commissioner Lin Tse-hsu, who brought on the war with Great Britain, called the Opium War, to Queen Victoria in 1839, mirrors the thinking of all Chinese. I shall quote only the pertinent sentences:

". . . In your honourable nation, which lies 20,000 li (about 7000 miles) away, separated by several oceans, these ways of God and feelings of mankind are the same; there is no one who does not understand the distinctions between death, life, profit, and injury. Our divine House reckons as its family all within the Four Seas; and our great Emperor, as though with the goodness of God, offers shelter to all alike, even distant wilds and far off countries sharing with us in life and in the means of nourishment.

". . . It may be added that rhubarb, tea, silk, etc., are among the most precious products of the Middle Kingdom, and that if the Outside nations were unable to obtain these, they would be deprived of the necessaries of life. That our divine House, regarding all with equal goodness, allows these goods to be sold without stint for export beyond the sea, and extends its favours to sympathy with the foreigner, is solely to model its own feelings upon those of God and Mother Earth.

". . . Our divine House controls the myriad nations by a spiritual majesty which is unfathomable; do not say that you were not warned in time!"

Perhaps another paragraph might be cited from Liang Chi-chao, a recent Chinese philosopher and politician, who attended the Paris Peace Conference in 1919:

"The greatest country in the greatest of the five continents of the world,—which is it? My country, the Middle State, the Flowery Land! The people who number one-third of the human race—who are they? My countrymen of the Middle State, the Flowery Land! Annals which extend back without a break for over four thousand years,—of what country are these? Of my country, the Middle State, the Flowery Land! My country contains four hundred million inhabitants, who all speak what is fundamentally the same language, and use the same script: of no other country can this be said."

Kennedy's Hard Decision On Laos Could Precipitate World War III

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—John F. Kennedy faces one of the most agonizing decisions of his short but hectic Presidential career. The question is whether to rescue the tiny kingdom of Laos by risking war with Red China.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff, after long and careful study, have told the President that the only real way to save Laos is by bombing the Red Chinese mainland. What Kennedy faces, therefore, is an alternative similar to that which Truman faced in Korea—namely, to bomb the Chinese north of the Yalu River and thereby risk world war.

The agonizing alternatives were placed before the President following the last meeting of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. At this meeting they discussed three alternatives:

1. Send Thai and South Vietnamese troops into Laos to bolster the badly demoralized Royal Laotian Army. This, while possible, would only run the risk of bringing a far greater number of Chinese troops into the beleaguered country. The Chinese have the manpower and, the Joint Chiefs believed, would be glad of an excuse to use it.

2. Pull out altogether and admit an American defeat.

3. Bomb the supply centers of the pro-Communist Pathet Lao. These are located just across the border in Red China.

This last alternative was put forward by Adm. Harry Felt in talks with Secretary of Defense McNamara during the latter's visit to Southeast Asia. Felt was careful to say he was not recommending it, only advising of the possibility.

The Joint Chiefs also suggested this alternative to President Kennedy. They made it clear this was a political decision, incurring the risks of world war, which he and he alone would have to make.

Laos Is Gone

During last Monday morning's meeting of the Joint Chiefs, several other cold and sober facts were discussed.

Fact One was that as of this moment Laos is gone, the Pathet Lao defeat of the Royalist field forces is complete except for the mopping up. The Royalist field army has been routed and nothing stands between the Pathet Lao and the capital except a small security force. Only U. S. intervention can prevent the Pathet Lao from taking over the capital and the entire country if they wish.

Fact Two was that American military advisers had urged the right-wing royalists not to concentrate their troops around Nam Tha in the North. We had repeated the warnings over and over. They were ignored. And exactly what we feared happened; the Pathet Lao overwhelmed right-wing forces at Nam Tha, even though they had only 2,200 men against around 5,000 right-wing loyalists.

Fact Three—U. S. troops would be lost in any limited warfare intervention by the United States.

The Joint Chiefs were especially emphatic on this point. They warned against frittering away our strength on halfway measures. There is one U. S. Army combat team of about 1,000 men already in Thailand, plus 1,800 marines. But they would be a drop in the bucket if it came to a military showdown. And the Joint Chiefs fear any use of American troops would bring a mass of Red Chinese swarming down from the North.

The United States, they warned, cannot fight this kind of war without striking the source of supply — namely, Red China; which means the risk of world war.

Phoumi Irks JFK

President Kennedy has made no secret, in talks with State Department and Defense leaders, that he is burned up with Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, the right-wing deputy premier who is real boss of the Royalist government. The general has repeatedly ignored American attempts to form a coalition government between the right wing, the neutralists, and the Pathet Lao.

Phoumi has argued that this would only lead to a gradual Communist takeover. Kennedy advisers, on the other hand, point out that right-wing refusal to cooperate has led to far worse than a gradual Communist take-over. It is leading to a complete pro-Communist take-over by force. If a coalition had been formed, the UN supervisory commission would have had some control; but with the military rout of the Royalists, the supervisory commission has no influence.

Kennedy was so down on Gen. Phoumi Nosavan that last February he cut off the $3,000,000-a-month payroll to his loyalist army. The general has been scurrying around other parts of Southeast Asia looking for aid and was not around to lead his troops when they were put to rout last week.

Only hopes on the otherwise bleak Laotian horizon are: first, the Russians; second, neutralist leader Souvanna Phouma.

The State Department has appealed to Soviet Ambassador Dobrynin in vigorous language to call off the Communists' violation of the ceasefire agreement, and the Russians have seemed anxious to prevent war. Averell Harriman, former ambassador to Moscow, now Assistant Secretary of State for the Far East, has reported that the Russians have been consistently cooperative in regard to Laos.

They have previously persuaded their side to cooperate in a coalition government. We have not been able to persuade our side. But how much influence Moscow has with the Red Chinese is now a question. State Department reports have indicated that the rift between the two is wide.

Meanwhile American diplomats have been begging Prince Souvanna Phouma, the neutralist now living in Paris, to fly back to his country and try to resurrect the coalition. There was a time when our Central Intelligence was undercutting Souvanna Phouma, but he has finally agreed to fly back and help us out.

Businessmen Worried About JFK's Advisers

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON — What the man who has the ear of President Kennedy tells him about business is important to know—and perhaps for everybody to read about whenever possible. That's why the address given by Professor Walter W. Heller, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, this week in New York City before the New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants is worth a careful examination. It throws some light on the plight of American businessmen today.

While the speech explains some general principles that are vital, it doesn't indicate just how they are going to be applied.

Professor Heller takes note of what's happening in the stock market currently, but doesn't come to grips with the psychological situations in the national economy which are so important in building confidence in the future. He spoke first in an optimistic vein about the gains in production and income in the first quarter of 1962 and then said:

"Some of you may wonder about the divergence between the current economic indicators emanating from Pennsylvania Avenue and the current price quotations from Wall Street. So do I at times. The stock market's constant reappraisals of its own verdicts produces some interesting mysteries. I cannot tell you whether price-earnings ratios were too high a few months ago or whether they are too low today. It is not that I am keeping a secret, the fact is that no mortal man knows the answer.

"But the things I do know suggest that the market's downturn since March 15 is not a reflection of current disappointments and downward revision in the near-term economic outlook. For one thing, the $52.4 billion profits figure for the final quarter of 1961 and the preliminary earnings statements for the first quarter of 1962 have, on the whole, exceeded the projection of most business and financial experts six months ago.

"Secondly, there is encouraging direct evidence on business expectations. The majority of businessmen expect improvements in sales and earnings, according to surveys conducted recently—after the steel price episode—by the National Association of Purchasing Agents and by Dun and Bradstreet. According to the Dun and Bradstreet findings, business optimism has increased in the past three months. We share that optimism."

Unfortunately, statistics of this kind on "expectations" do not always gibe with psychological attitudes either inside or outside of the business field. Dr. Heller seems to think the prospects are good "for prolonged expansion" and that this provides "solid support for business fixed investment."

Businessmen privately, however, do not talk that way. They show real concern. When speaking for publication, they naturally conceal their pessimism and feelings of uncertainty. They hesitate to add fuel to the flames. But the doubt is plainly there. Dr. Heller unwittingly explains the real cause for hesitation in business planning when further on in his speech he says:

"Of course, in a free market economy, investment does not happen automatically. It is consciously undertaken by businessmen in the expectation of securing future profits. This administration fully appreciates the importance of adequate profit levels—and business confidence—in generating the increased investment that is so vital to speed our lagging rate of economic growth and to promote full use of our current economic potential.

"Profits are among the most sensitive reactors to economic slack. In periods of rising economic activity, they climb vigorously, as demonstrated by their one-third rise from the first to fourth quarters in 1961. But even a slowdown, let alone a slump, can cut into profits painfully. In the first quarter of 1962, the recovery did not register the kind of buoyant gains we had hoped it might, nor did profits continue their rapid rise. But the stepped-up pace of expansion points to profits gains ahead.

"In the final analysis, the outlook for profits and investments is tied to the outlook for continued expansion—and vice versa. The administration realizes that no expansion can last without substantial help from private investment—and the administration's economic policies and programs reflect this awareness."

But abstract statements like this unhappily do not fit in with concrete actions taken by the administration that disturb confidence and cause frustration in planning for the future. It isn't just because the President calls the executives of one of our largest steel companies a name synonymous with "sons of Beelzebub." It isn't because Mr. Kennedy sometimes talks one way and acts another on business and labor matters. It is because all around the President are men who have written statements and messages for him which have disturbed businessmen. They see a tampering with the price structure without sanction of law. They read of tax proposals that threaten an interference with the system of American production in companies abroad. Also, the whole question of taxes on business in this country has been confused by a variety of proposals that add up to fundamental changes in business operations. All this produces uncertainty.

Sooner or later, these advisers to the President will have to become realistic and take cognizance of the fact that it is deeds, not words, that count. Steps that will make possible "productivity" gains which can actually be reflected in better margins of profit—not in mere "expectations"—have everything to do with the growth of confidence and with sound planning for the future of American business through private investment.

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

WITHHOLDING TAXES — Mounting complaints to senators and congressmen about the administration's proposal to withhold taxes on dividends and interest are making the legislators uneasy.

They're fearful that the voters may voice their resentment at the polls next election day when the entire House and a third of the Senate come up for election. Democrats in the House, where the measure already has been approved, are particularly worried and are looking to the Senate to remove the offending feature of the tax bill.

There are several unusual aspects in the situation. In the first place, the anti-withholding campaign has been stimulated by implying that it is a new tax. It is not. Individuals must report their dividends and interest as a part of their taxable income. But over the years, many taxpayers have not done so—to such an extent that the government estimates an annual revenue loss from this source of more than $800 million.

The public uproar is unique, too, in the fact that it appears to have had a delayed fuse. For many months while the House Ways and Means Committee and the House membership considered the bill, there was virtually no public attention given to the withholding feature. What little public concern there was, was over some features which would give business a tax break through encouraging modernization of manufacturing equipment.

What actually set off the outcry was that some bankers decided to fight against the responsibility to withhold taxes on the interest of their millions of depositors. Some banks have sent form letters to their depositors urging them to make their protests known to Congress.

It is likely now that the whole idea will be killed on Capitol Hill. And if it is there's a good chance that President Kennedy will veto the measure when it reaches his desk some time late this session.

Family Crisis—Part 2

Grand Bahama. — It was morning again. The door was ajar and the sun traced a hot ingot across the rug. The palm trees on the lawn whispered to the birds to be quiet. John Bishop was comatose. The head was on the chest and it could be turned in any direction and he would not resist. The white whiskers were long on his cheeks.

The doctor had been there, and had left. Pulse: 55; Heart: weak and erratic. Respiration: 30. Temperature: 100.2; Feet, swollen and blue. Lips: cyanotic. "He needs a hospital bad," the doctor said, "but he is very weak for travel." That was the little crisis. The hiss of the oxygen was steady. In the yellow mask, my father looked like a retired space man.

Bob Brumby phoned. "There's a DC-3 ready to leave for Miami," he said. "The pilot says he has oxygen and he'll take your family." I though about it. I understood my own fear very well. If I left him here, he'd die. If I bounced him in a plane, he'd die. "Let me talk to the pilot, please," I said.

He said he was Roger Byrne of Jacksonville. He worked for Owens-Illinois Glass Company. It was a company plane, but he was sure his superiors would not mind if he helped a sick man. I thanked him, and decided to ask my father. This is the cowardly move. He was in no shape to make a decision. I slapped his cheeks and, at last his eyes opened and he looked up at me. The mouth hung open. He smiled briefly and fell asleep.

"Okay," I said to the pilot. "We'll go. Thanks for thinking of us." Kelly finished dressing the children and combing the hair. The little ones had dozens of questions. Why is he so sleepy? What does die mean? We could take him swimming. Would he like that? Does he always sleep on a chair? Yes. And yes. Yes. Yes.

It was restrained bedlam. It required two strong Jack Tar bellboys just to change the pajamas. The oxygen mask fell off three times. Kelly packed his clothes and his medicines. We no longer knew which ones he had taken and which ones he had skipped. A Cadillac was backed up on the lawn. The Bahamian maids stood outside the door, leaning on brooms, looking.

John Bishop was lifted onto a wheelchair. When the sun hit his face he squinted his eyes tight. It was the only sign of life. Lifting him onto the back seat of the car was an engineering problem. The children were taken to the airport in another automobile and put on the plane.

The pilot met us beside the Owens-Illinois DC-3. He had passengers. I felt that our case would depress them. "Think nothing of it," Mr. Byrne said. "They understand. On our way into Miami, I'll call for an ambulance and a doctor. They'll be waiting." He grinned. "Stop worrying. He's going to be all right."

My father looked like a lump of blankets as he was hauled backward onto the plane. Getting him into a seat was another problem. Kelly stood behind him and held the yellow mask to his face. I had a sheaf of bills for the bellhops. They spurned the money. They left perspiring and heaving for breath. Brumby waved goodbye. "He's Irish," he velled over the noise of the engines. "He'll make it."

The pilots brought the ship to the head of the runway, turned, and let her go. As we cleared the jungle, Kelly drew the curtain next to John's face, so that the sun would not bother him. In 40 minutes, we were coming down at Miami International. It was as Pilot Byrne said: below was the revolving red light of the ambulance. Some Dade County sheriffs were there to lift the patient from the plane.

A short pleasant man introduced himself as Dr. J. C. Frell. In 10 minutes, I was riding the front seat of the ambulance. We had made it and he was still perking back there. At Jackson Memorial Hospital, a cluster of cream-colored buildings, everything was orderly. Swiftly and silently, my father moved out of my hands.

He was wheeled to Room 788-S. Someone put in a call for Dr. Martin S. Belle, a cardiovascular doctor. Around the clock nurses were ordered. A young man in a white uniform rolled the bed down. I asked him to put it up. "My father has slept in chairs for years," I said. "He can't breathe if he's down flat."

Nurses were in and out of the room like starched swans. I kissed my father and went into the hall. "He's not going to make it," I said to Kelly. "He's too far gone."

"Let's go downstairs for a cup of coffee," Kelly said. "These hospitals always have a coffee shop." "Where are the kids?" I said. They were in the admitting room prattling about their dolls. "Did you ever see anything like that pilot?" Kelly said as the elevator started down.

"There's a story about that man in the Bible," I said. "It's called The Good Samaritan.". . .

There's No Justification For 'Eating For Two'

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

A pregnant woman should eat the food to which she is accustomed unless she is gaining too much weight. There is no justification for "eating for two." Consume a well balanced variety of foods including meat, green vegetables, fruits, cereals, and milk.

Excessive weight is highly undesirable. It is unwise to gain more than 25 pounds and most women are ahead of the game if they keep it down to 20 pounds. Don't put on more than 2½ pounds per month. This requires discipline from the beginning of pregnancy. The results are worth the trouble because it means much to the health of the mother and child. In addition, the figure is preserved.

The recommended daily diet during pregnancy should include a minimum of one serving of meat, fish, or chicken; one egg; one pint of milk; three to four slices of dark, whole grain, or enriched white bread; two or three servings of vegetables (one raw and one green or yellow); one or two servings of fruit; and a tablespoon of butter or fortified margarine. Some physicians also suggest a serving of liver once a week.

This is the basic diet. Add sufficient additional foods to satisfy appetite without gaining too much poundage. Proteins are most important because they supply the building blocks and substances for repair. Most proteins come from meats, eggs, and dairy products. The vegetable proteins are found in peas, beans, and wheat cereals.

This basic diet also offers the 13 or more essential mineral elements. Milk contains calcium and phosphorus and too much of the latter depresses rather than increases the level of calcium in the blood. This leads to muscle cramps, so common during pregnancy. This means an excessive milk intake is not necessary so long as a calcium gulconate tablet is taken. A multiple vitamin product also is helpful.

BALLOON BLOWING

B. C. writes: I blew up some balloons for my children and since then I have had pain in one ear. What damage did I do to it?

REPLY

Examination will be needed to answer this question. Blowing the balloons increased pressure within the nose and throat. Some of the secretions may have been forced into the eustachian tube and from there into the inner ear. The air may be trapped in the ear cavity or inflamation may exist.

X-RAYS AND ARTHRITIS

T. N. writes: Does arthritis of the spine show up on X-ray?

REPLY

Yes, but there seems to be no relationship between symptoms and the severity of the process as seen on an X-ray film. Some people have extensive arthritis, according to the X-ray, but never had a backache in their life.

PREGNANCY IMPOSSIBLE

Mrs. X. writes: Can a woman become pregnant after the uterus is removed, if the ovaries remain?

REPLY

No, because there is no place for the sperm and ovum to meet.

To the limit of space questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

Try And Stop Me

Boris Karloff was giving a party one evening in Hollywood, and one guest called up to get directions. "Is it far from where I am now?" asked the guest. "Oh, about fourteen miles," estimated Karloff, "as the bat flies."

From a personal column in a western gazette: "Gent who smokes, drinks, and carouses, wishes to meet lady who smokes, drinks, and carouses. Object: smoking, drinking, and carousing."

Sidney Harris, acidulous Chicago critic, won the undying enmity of a fat, prolific lady novelist with a one-sentence review of her newest potboiler. "Miss Black's new book," noted Harris, "is underwhelming."

Keyser Signs Job Contract

KEYSER — The Mayor and Council signed a contract Tuesday with Morris-Knowles, Inc., Easton, Pa., in conjunction with the construction of a sewage disposal plant.

The contract deals with preliminary plans, design and supervision of the plant, required by the State Water Resources Board, consisting of interceptor sewers, regulators and overflow chambers, pump station, river crossing and treatment facilities to accomplish the objective of the order of the state board.

Two weeks ago the Easton firm was granted authority by city officials to make necessary application to the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency, Philadelphia, for a loan along this line.

Cost of the local project has been estimated at $850,000. The federal government allocates $250,000 or one-third of the cost, whichever is less. The city is responsible for the remainder.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Pressing Problems Pack Away

When you go on your vacation, borrow the tricks of a well-known songstress who travels incessantly yet makes fabulously attractive appearances at all times. Here are the secrets which she says makes it possible for her to look her best while far from home base:

Naturally, her wardrobe en-route is made up of as many of the new and marvelously wrinkle-resistant fabrics as possible and yours should be, too. In addition, always observe the following practices.

1. After pressing, allow several hours for clothes to dry and cool before packing.

2. To judge the amount of luggage required and how you'll stow it, make a list of all that you plan to carry and lay it out.

3. Place toilet articles and cosmetics in the train case. With neat disposal, there will also be room for a tricot gown, negligee, folding slippers, small jewelry case and reading matter.

4. The trick in packing any unpartitioned case lies in fitting in the enitre cargo so nothing can shift. Put heavy articles on the bottom. Shoes should be cocooned in shoe bags or tissue and placed face to face, toe nestling in heel of the other. In remaining bottom space fit the harder objects and unmussables such as sweaters and hosiery case. Fill chinks with wedges of tissue and securely tie ribbons attached to the case lining.

5. Cover this layer with tissue. Lay your lingerie, gloves, scarves and handkerchiefs, all neatly encased, over the first layer to form a level cushion that acts a a buffer between heavy and fragile articles.

Now for the major operation: Put your sport clothes in first, working up to the frostiest on top. Lay skirts, shorts and the like on a flat surface, placing a piece of tissue on each and making a minimum number of folds. Dresses should be spread face down, sleeves filled with tissue and the surface tissue covered. Draw each side of the skirt over until it forms a straight line with the opposite side seam of the blouse. Turn sleeves back at the shoulder seams and place them flat against the blouse. Bring the hem up to touch the waistline. Turn the blouse back to fold along the waistline. Fill in all chinks with tissue.

Mobile Classrooms May Solve Space Problem In Chicago, Other Cities

By ROCHELLE SINGER

CHICAGO (UPI) — A Chicago executive believes he has the answer to the nation's shifting school population — shifting class rooms.

Paul D. Shlensky, head of Mobile School Facilities Inc., said mobile-type rooms can put the school space where it's needed relatively economically and without delay.

On the outside mobile classrooms look like two joined house trailers, minus wheels. Inside they look like classrooms.

Chicago's board of education has bought 150 such units to help solve the problem of double-shift classes. Some are in operation. But their use has aroused controversy.

Negro leaders say the mobile rooms are being used to "maintain patterns of racial segregation." Some groups would prefer to ease the crowded classroom problem by moving pupils to other schools where space is available.

(NAACP) The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People holds that it would be less costly to move pupils. An NAACP spokesman said the situation is being studied "to get the true facts to present to the school board."

Edwin C. Berry, executive director of the Chicago Urban League, said the mobile units are being pl nted in predominantly Negro areas. The school board says that's where they're needed.

The Chicago units cost $8,160. Shlensky's units are rented at $250 a year. He figures the units will stay in good condition at least 10 years.

"Our mobile units are 40 by 20 feet and can accommodate an instructor and 30 pupils," he said. "Such facilities enable school systems to provide seating space quickly while permanent building construction is being financed."

Shlensky said the units can be parted through the middle when it comes time to move them. They can be jacked up, placed on wheels, and moved to another site.

"Each classroom has its own cloakroom, lavatory facilities, full wall-length blackboard, windows, bulletin board, art exhibit board area, book shelves, water fountain and ventilation system," Shlensky said.

Heating and lighting equipment can be connected to the main school utilities, Shlensky said, and most units can be put into service in less than a week.

He said his firm has received inquiries from school boards in Milwaukee, Tustin, Calif., and Warrensburg, Sweet Springs and St. Joseph, Mo.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Dorothy Manners

(Substituting for Louella Parsons)

HOLLYWOOD — How do you like the tie-up of Ben Casey and Sophia Loren? You just know I mean Vince Edwards and Sophia, and it's Carl Foreman who has pulled off the coup of landing TV's most sulky doctor to make love to Oscar winning Sophia in "The Victors."

As the drama will be filmed in England, France, Italy and Sweden as well as in Hollywood, this brings up the question: Will "Ben Casey" be back on TV this fall with Edwards at the stethescope?

That Vince and the (Bing) Crosby Enterprises, his TV producers, have been hassling over money is no secret. No decision has been reached. But decision or no decision — Foreman has the good doctor snagged for his movie which Columbia will release.

I suppose no one will ever know the way Julie Andrews, the original stage "My Fair Lady", feels about losing the screen role to Audrey Hepburn. Sometimes this comes harder than you suspect. Gertrude Berge's feelings were deeply dented over Rosalind Russell inheriting "A Majority of One" and so were Ethel Merman's over losing "Gypsy" to the same actress.

But Julie Andrews may have some interesting movie plans of her own. Last week she lunched with Walt Disney in the studio commissary and there isn't any reason in the world why they might not have been talking about Julie starring in the "Mary Popkin" musical for him.

Incidentally, the other diners will be treated to the first glimpse of Peggy's new eye-socking string of Oriental pearls. Formerly the property of the Duchess of Alba, they were given to Peggy by the grateful management of Basin Street East in New York where she broke even her own record.

I also get it that there's a movie in the works for Peggy. Richard Quine is talking to her about starring in "Dilemma" at Columbia.

Jane Fonda's romance with stage director Andreas Voutsinas goes on, and on, and on. She makes no bones of the fact that when she goes to England in late July for "In the Cool of the Day," Voutsinas will not be far behind. He coaches her in all her roles which is all right with her current directors as long as he stays off the set.

There's a happy reunion these days between Jane and her father Henry Fonda at MGM. They're working on the same lot for the first time, Jane in "Period of Adjustment" and Hank to wind up his scenes in "How the West Was Won."

Everything is cooperating smoothly about Cliff Robertson playing John F. Kennedy in "PT 109" but his—hair! Cliff doesn't plan to use any makeup except a deep tan. "That I can pick up in about four or five days in Palm Springs," he says.

But the fun started when he tried to change the part in his hair from the left to the right side as the President's is—and was when he was in the Navy. Sticks up all over the place and just WON'T look like JFK's. "It will by the time the picture starts," says Cliff grimly, "if I have to train it with a net!"

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Good news out of Phoenix about Bob Morgan, Yvonne De Carlo's husband, whose leg was amputated. The plea for blood donors was answered so well that Bob is showing marked improvement. May be able to be moved to their home in Hollywood in 10 days if the improvement continues.

Newspaper columnist and TV's Ed Sullivan planes to the coast shortly to play himself in scenes with Janet Leigh, Dick Van Dyke and Ann-Margret in "Bye, Bye, Birdie." Producer Fred Kohlmar and director George Sidney expect Ed to put on quite a "show."

The Dave Roses are off tomorrow for Glasgow and Dublin before Dave reports this fall to start his 15th year as conductor of Red Skelton's TV show and his fourth year with "Bonanza."

Cast Prescribes Tea For Leading Lady

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Olivia de Havilland has been losing sleep since coming here to star in a Broadway play and the whole cast has been prescribing for her.

"First it was cut orange flower tea," Miss de Havilland says in a rapid, animated explanation. "They said, 'Be sure you're sitting on the dege of the bed when you drink it.' So I got INTO bed and then I lay calmly for two hours — instead of in a state of agitation.

"Henry Fonda gave me some capsules with seven herbs — skullcap, passion flowers, pulsitilla, I do like something called pulsitilla—to help a person who is tense and nervous and who has been having trouble sleeping.

"Then Henry got me some orange leaf tea; he told me to steep it for 10 minutes. Well I was asleep in half an hour. That's the first time that has happened to me since I've been in the United States this time."

Undoubtedly also contributing to the actress' lessening tension are the good reviews which greeted her performance in "A Gift of Time," which opened Feb. 22. Critics did, however, question how many theater-goers would be able to take the plot subject. Miss de Havilland and Fonda play the American writers, Lael and Charles Wertenbaker, in the adaptation of Mrs. Wertenbaker's book, "Death of a Man," the story of her husband from the time he learned he had cancer until he took his own life.

"The play moved me so deeply," Miss de Havilland says, "I thought, 'I have to do it. That's all there is to it.'

"You don't get that affected frequently by something you read. It is the kind of thing you must make a great effort for and sacrifice for."

In Miss de Havilland's case, the sacrifice was leaving her husband, magazine editor Pierre Galante, and her two children, Benjamin and Gisele, at their home in Paris and giving up a winter skiing vacation in Switzerland.

SCENE FROM PLAY—Henry Fonda and Olivia de Havilland in a scene from "A Gift of Time," the Broadway play based on a book by Lael Tucker Wertenbaker.

However, plans already are made for the family to come to New York during the spring school vacation and this summer, if the play continues to run, Miss de Havilland intends to be absent four weeks for a family vacation in Austria.

Before play rehearsals began, in November, Fonda went to Europe and the two costars went to Cibourne, on the Spanish border of France, to learn the atmosphere of the place where the Wertenbakers had lived.

Miss de Havilland relates, "we had lunch, eating the kind of fish soup which we speak of in the play. We went to St. Jean-de-Lux, to the radiologist's, into the waiting room and into the room where the X-rays were first shown.

"We took the walk which is indicated in the play and I even bought Henry a Basque shirt.

"We went to 12 different places trying to get him a Basque shirt. It was off-season, you see. I got angry. I thought, 'This is idiotic that in a Basque town we can't get a Basque shirt.' But in the very, very last place left to search for such a thing, we found one.

"We went into all the rooms of the house where the Wertenbakers had lived. Many objects they had bought were still there.

"They made a tremendous impression on that area—which is unusual for outsiders to do. They were accepted with great affection. Everywhere we went, people knew them and spoke of them beautifully and with high regard. I think we can all be proud of that, as Americans."

Miss de Havilland, winner of two Academy Awards, is better known for movie than stage roles. Her last appearance on Broadway was in 1951 in a poorly received "Romeo and Juliet." She has a movie just released, "Light in the Piazza," made last summer in Florence, and the only previous time she acted opposite Henry Fonda was 20 years ago when she played his wife in th. film comedy, "The Male Animal."

On that subject, the actress laughingly said, "Not long ago, somebody asked Henry, 'To what do you attribute these 20 years of married life?' And he replied, 'To 20 years of vacation.'"

Television Notes

NEW YORK (UPI) — The ABC-TV network again will carry the American Football League games next fall. Two games each Sunday; one in the East, and one in the West.

Have some TV titles. Coming up on "Route 66" for CBS is "Hell Is Empty, All the Devils Are Here." And ABC's "Naked City" has one with David Wayne called "The Multiplicity of Herbert Kronish."

The nightly syndicated series starring Mike Wallace and known as 'PM' will be terminated June 22. Wallace decided to go on to other broadcasting assignments, not yet identified, and the Westinghouse Broadcasting Company felt 'PM' was so closely identified with him that it would have to be scrapped. The interview show is on 14 stations across the country.

The summer replacement for "Hennesey" on CBS-TV, 10 p.m. Mondays, will be 18 episodes selected from the three seasons of this program. These will run from May 28 through Sept. 17. The series is being discontinued, although it will be around in syndication for years.

With its "Flintstones" cartoon series firmly anchored in the Stone Age and on the ABC-TV network, Hanna-Barbera Productions next fall will add to the ABC roster an animated half-hour series dealing with life in the future. "The Jetsons" is the title. It deals with a family of a century or so from now. ABC has it set for 7:30 p.m. Sundays.

Handsome Mike Connors, hero of the "Tightrope" series of a couple of seasons ago, has been signed by Screen Gems for a new dramatic series called "Turning Point" for the 1963-64 season. In it he will play a science teacher and basketball coach in a high school in a large city. Meanwhile during the 1962-63 season, Screen Gems expects to keep him busy with guest roles in its "Route 66," "Naked City" and "Empire" series.

If you were in England and were served what are called Sally Lunns, you would be ating a sweet cake often served at tea time.

Midland Is Now Operating Under New Town Charter

MIDLAND — John J. Mathias, town attorney, reported to the Mayor and Council at their recent meeting, that the municipal government is now operating under its new charter.

After advertising and posting the charter, it became effective on May 5, Mr. Mathias explained. Certified copies of resolutions covering adoption etc., will now be sent, he said, to the Secretary of State and the Department of Legislative Reference of Maryland.

Mr. Mathias said the drawing of new ordinances is progressing rapidly and should be completed by early June, for council's consideration and action.

Street Commissioner Wilbur Crowe reported to council that Lonaconing Street and Reilleys Alley have been blacktopped by the Cumberland Contracting Company. All streets damaged by heavy coal trucks have been repaired, he added.

On all streets and roadways within the corporate limits, shoulders will be filled with crushed stone, where needed, he reported. A pavement in front of the Broderick property has been raised with stone and blacktopped, and parking lots at Midland Methodist Church and St. Joseph's Catholic Church have also been paved, he said.

Street Commissioner Donald Cook was appointed by Mayor Lionel D. Baker, to represent council at the first meeting of the County Commissioners for a discussion of lower taxes for municipalities.

Commissioner Cook reported that a new lawn mower has been purchased and town employes have cut grass in playground areas and along the sides of a number of streets. Brush and trees have been cleared from Georges Creek, he said, and considerable work was done by town employes during the recent clean-up week campaign.

Council approved repairs and remodeling to the town hall, including a new dropped ceiling in the large hallway and new lighting fixtures. All windows will be repaired and the interior will be painted.

California 'Giant' Begins To Flex Political Muscles

By JERRY RENOLDS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Like a husky kid whose cheek fuzz is just turning to stubble, California is beginning to feel the full strength of its political muscles.

Politically, Californians have been reaching for the stars since Stanford University grad Herbert Hoover left the White House. So far, they've fallen short.

Earl Warren tried for the vice presidency in 1948 when he was GOP governor of the Golden State. He and presidential candidate Thomas E. Dewey went under in the unexpected victory of Harry S. Truman.

Richard M. Nixon achieved the vice presidency in 1952 and 1956 as the running mate of Eisenhower but failed to succeed him in 1960 when John F. Kennedy edged Nixon by 120,000 votes out of 70 million cast in the nation.

Goes For Governor

Nixon, who won California by 35,000 votes in the presidential contest, now is running hard for governor. The incumbent is Edmund G. (Pat) Brown, the second Democratic governor in California in the 20th century. Nixon says he's not interested in running for president in 1964.

With California's booming population—expected to surpass New York state's late this year—has come growing political maturity. There are many who wouldn't be surprised if Kennedy is succeeded in the White House by a Californian.

Joseph P. Harris, University of California election authority, put it this way:

"After 1962 it (California) will have 38 members in the House of Representatives and 40 electoral votes in presidential elections. When it is united, its future voice in Congress and in national party conventions will always be potent. Its political leaders will be among the leaders of the nation . . .

Gains Seats

California gained eight seats in Congress as a result of the 1960 census, while New York lost two. This gave the Empire State delegation a 41-38 edge, but it probably will drop to second place as a result of the 1970 census when California is expected to go to 43 seats.

But above all, California's climate, terrain and history have established an informality and a freedom of spirit that have created an amazing giant. It is called the independent voter.

His origins go back to 1910 when a GOP reform group fighting entrenched machine control selected a militantly aggressive lawyer named Hiram W. Johnson as its candidate for governor.

Johnson won election and in 1913 his administration sponsored the cross-filing system whereby a candidate could file for nomination by both major parties and be elected uncontested if he won both primaries.

Effect of cross-filing was to promote non-partisanship and result in voters paying little attention to a candidate's party affiliation. The system was abolished after the 1958 election, but the tradition of voting for the man rather than the party lingered on.

Statistics Misleading

Thus, while voter registration figures show Democrats outnumbering Republicans about 3-2, they don't usually vote that way. In the past 20 years they have leaned heavily toward middle-of-the-road Republicans.

Republicans Earl Warren and Goodwin J. Knight held the governor's chair for 15 years until 1958 when Brown took it away by a million-vote margin in a battle with former U.S. Sen. William F. Knowland, a strong conservative.

Although Democrats outnumbered Republicans by 900,000 voters, Eisenhower won California in the 1952 presidential election by 700,000 votes and in 1956 by 600,000.

And Nixon polled 300,000 more votes than there were registered Republicans in the 1960 race against Kennedy. At the same time, Kennedy got 1.2 million fewer votes than there were registered Democrats.

But while California has a large body of independent, uncommitted voters, it also has a large share of extremists ranging from a busy Communist cell to the ultra rightists. It has socialists and John Birchers.

Blasts Birchers

Of the latter, Nixon has said "...those who accept or seek support from the John Birch society or the Minutemen are not serving America."

This drew fire from his opponent for the GOP gubernatorial nomination, Assemblyman Joseph C. Shell of Los Angeles. Shell is not a member of the Birch society but classes himself as a conservative and said Nixon had no business telling Republicans they should not belong to any organization.

By providing a happy hunting ground for political extremists, California is continuing a tradition that reached full flower in the depression era of the 1930s.

Such movements as Technocracy, the Utopians, author Upton Sinclair's EPIC movement (End Poverty In California) and Dr. Francis E. Townsend's old age pension plan won the support of tens of thousands of Californians seeking a means of regaining jobs and savings that were wiped out in the wake of the 1929 market crash.

FIRE DANGER SIGN INSTALLED IN NARROWS—The Maryland Department of Forests and Parks has installed a fire danger sign in the Narrows on city-owned land beautified by the Cumberland Jaycees. Left to right, standing, are Ray Valentine, supervisor of city streets; John D. May, Jaycee president; Linda Athey, John J. Long, streets commissioner; Lee Alexander, industrial arts teacher at Fort Hill; Victor D. Heisey, principal; W.A.C. Irwin, district forester; Allan Holt, ranger who will tend the meter; Brook Bodkin, senior forest supervisor, and A. R. Bond, assistant state forester. In the foreground are Dennis Wigfield, James Valentine, Albert Dayton, John Golden, Jerry Nines and Clifton Turner, Fort Hill students responsible for constructing the sign under supervision of Mr. Alexander.

A 16-station network has been set up around the world to follow and protect America's astronauts in orbit.

NEW YORK (AP) — How does the recent stock market slide stack up with the crash of 1929?

Statistically, there's no comparison. The near vertical dive of securities prices 33 years ago still has no counterpart in 1962.

"In a way, the (recent) decline has been considerably worse than in 1929 because many more people have had a poor experience and the experience has been of a much more complex sort," said Walter Gutman.

Gutman, a partner in Stearns & Co. who doubles as a connoisseur of the classics, said the "big crash" was widely blamed on gambling through stock buying largely on borrowed money.

"Part of the present decline," he added, "can be blamed on gambling too, with the growth trend fever taking the place of low margins.

"(But) when people bought stocks for 50 to 100 times earnings they weren't as clearly aware that they were gambling as people were in 1929."

Many To Enroll At College Here

Enrollment at Allegany Community College for the fall term will greatly exceed the approximately 100 now attending the college, according to William H. Smerling, registrar.

So far, Smerling says, the college has received 114 applications for enrollment in September. The total includes applications, test results or transcripts, he explained.

The majority of the applicants are from Allegany County, although others have come from West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and one from as far away as New Jersey.

Judging from the applications, Smerling says the prospects are primarily interested in the arts and sciences curriculum, although interest also is being shown in other fields.

The registrar added that the applications are pretty evenly divided between male and female students, with a slight majority going to the males.

Braves Ring Up Seven In First, Defeat Bucs, 7-2

Bob Shaw Winner, Friend Is Victim

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—The Milwaukee Braves, with Bob Shaw going the route, chased Bob Friend in the opening inning Thursday night and went on to wallop the Pittsburgh Pirates, 7-2.

Friend could not retire the side in the opening inning and when all seven Brave runs poured across, four of them were unearned.

Shaw, former American League ace, made his first appearance against the Pirates and lost his shutout in the seventh when Bill Virdon belted his first homer of the year.

In the first five innings, Shaw surrendered only three hits and in each instance the mild threat was erased by subsequent double plays. Shaw yielded the second Pirate run in the ninth when Roberto Clemente singled, driving in Virdon.

In forging the 7-0 lead in the opening frame, the Braves came up with their biggest outburst of the season for an inning. Their previous inning high was four runs. They combined six hits, including a triple by Howie Bedell and a double by Roy McMillan with a two-base error by Bob Skinner to chase Friend. The Braves sent 11 batters to the plate in the big inning.

Pirate manager Danny Murtaugh used three relief pitchers, Bob Veale, outstanding by hurling five hitless innings. Dick Groat extended his hitting streak through 10 games with a pair of singles.

Jack Molinas Indicted In Cage Bribe Scandal

Former Pro Star Is Charged As Master Fixer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jack Molinas, 30-year-old New York attorney and a former college and professional basketball star, was arrested Thursday and charged with being the master-fixer in the college scandals.

In the most widespread disclosure of fixed games since the scandals broke out in a large scale in 1951, New York District Attorney Frank Hogan indicted Molinas for bribing or conspiring to bribe 22 players from 12 colleges to dump a total of 25 games from coast to coast.

The names of 11 former college players were brought into the latest disclosures for the first time, as well as 13 previously identified "point - shavers" and 11 men names as co-conspirators in Molinas' far-flung operation.

Barred From NBA

Molinas, who was barred from playing in the National Basketball Association in 1954 after admitting he had bet on games in which he played for the Fort Wayne (now Detroit) Pistons, was arraigned and released on $5,000 bail.

The indictment against Molinas included five counts. There was one count of conspiracy; three counts of bribing William Dennis Reed of Flushing, N.Y., to dump three games played by Bowling Green University of Ohio, and another count charging him with an attempt to induce Reed to commit perjury before the grand jury.

Besides Reed, these were the new names brought into the latest scandal:

Reed's Bowling Green teammate, Thomas Falentano of New York.

Gary Kaufman of Brooklyn and Leroy Wright of Mt. Vernon, N.Y., both from the University of Pacific.

Salvatore Vergopia of Mt. Vernon and Leonard Whelan of New York, both from Niagara University.

Alabama Player Named

Leonard Kaplan of Baltimore, Md., captain of the University of Alabama.

Richard Hoffman, Michael Callahan and Robert Franz, all of Columbia, S.C., and Larry Dial of North Charlestown, S.C., who played for the University of South Carolina.

Three North Carolina State players whose names previously had been linked with fixed games were mentioned again in Thursday's developments. They were Don Gallagher of Raleigh, N.C.; Stan Niewierowski of Brooklyn and Anton Muelbauer of Brooklyn.

Rodger Ward

'500' SPEED BOYS—The top three qualifiers in the Indianapolis "500" are pictured, with Parnelli Jones, 28-year-old Torrance, Calif., pilot, gaining the pole position with an average qualifying speed of 150.370 miles per hour, first to hit the 150 mph goal. Parnelli was 12th in last year's race. Rodger Ward was second fastest and Bobby Marshman of Pottstown, Pa., was third. They're in front row.

Capon Bridge Downs Eagles

Fort Ashby Bows In 10 Innings, 7-6

Larry Whitacre's single scored the winning run in the bottom of the 10th inning yesterday as Capon Bridge High School edged Fort Ashby High's Eagles, 7-6, in a Potomac Valley Conference baseball contest at Capon Bridge.

The victory was the first of the season for Coach Arno Hott's tossers and snapped a seven-game losing streak. It gave Capon Bridge a split with the Eagles who won the opener at Fort Ashby, 4-1.

Lloyd Brill, hurling two innings of shutout ball in relief of starter Rick Davy, was the winning pitcher. Gene Spaid opened the Capon Bridge rally with a single but was out at second. Oates and Brill then walked to set the stage for Whitacre's game-winning blow.

Jim Hoey absorbed the loss for Fort Ashby which bowed for the eighth time this season. Hoey's record now is 1-3 for the year.

Spaid and Ed Whitacre obtained two hits apiece for Capon Bridge while Harold Kerns collected a single and double for the Eagles. The lineups:

Yale Coach Will Help Sudan Quint

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — Joe Vancisin, coach of the Yale University basketball team, will leave Sunday for Sudan as part of the cultural exchange program.

The State Department announced Wednesday night that Vancisin would stay in Sudan for 90 days during which he would work with Sudan's olympic basketball team.

Fullmer Arrives For Downes Bout

LONDON (UPI) — Don Fullmer of West Jordan, Utah, arrived here Thursday with manager Marv Jensen to prepare for his fight against former world middleweight champion Terry Downes at the Empire Pool, Wembley, next Tuesday.

After Fullmer and Jensen landed here, they learned that all their luggage — including Don's boxing kit — had been left in New York.

"We should have been here yesterday," Jensen said Thursday, "But I had food poisoning. We flew to New York Wednesday night from Salt Lake City and had only 20 minutes to catch the London plane. That was when our baggage went astray."

Jensen said he was confident Fullmer would defeat Downes, and he predicted that the scheduled 10-rounder would go the distance.

Cards Interested

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The St. Louis Cardinals admitted Thursday they were interested in the Chicago Cubs' George Altman, but denied reports they were ready to swap pitcher Ernie Broglio and outfielder Charlie James.

General Manager Bing Devine said Broglio's name was never mentioned. He said the Cardinals were interested in Altman now that Redbird Minnie Minoso was hospitalized with a fractured skull and a broken right wrist.

Collins Leads At Hot Springs

Fires First Round 65 For Stroke Edge

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — Bill Collins parlayed masterful iron work into five straight birdies and a seven-under par 65 Thursday to take the first round lead in the $20,000 Hot Springs Invitational Golf Tournament.

The big belter from Miami, Fla., winner here in 1960, birdied the last five holes—and faced only one putt of over five feet. That was a 12 footer on the 411-yard par-four 16th which he sank.

His streaking finiah put him one stroke in front of Kel Nagle, the 1960 British Open champion and 1961 Swiss Open winner. Nagle, 41, of Sydney, Australia, shot 31-35.

Al Geiberger of Carlton Oaks, Calif., and Buster Cupit of Fort Smith, Ark., were tied for third with 67. One stroke back at 68 were Jerry Magee of Toronto, Canada, Jimmy Powell of Yorba Lina, Calif., George McKeown of Little Rock, Larry Mowry of Bonita, Calif., Bob McAllister of Claremont, Calif., and Jack McGowen of Toledo, Ohio.

Jaipur Installed As 5-2 Choice For 86th Preakness Tomorrow

Derby Winner And Ridan Are Listed At 3-1

Hartack Will Ride Decidedly; Eleven In $188,300 Race

By RAY AYRES
UPI Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Jaipur took over as favorite for Saturday's running of the $188,300 Preakness stakes Thursday with 11 horses entered for the second of the Triple Crown classics.

And Horatio Luro, trainer of Decidedly, the Kentucky Derby winner, heartily agreed with the official Pimlico odds maker who listed Jaipur a 5 to 2 choice in the "run for the black eyed Susans." Decidedly and Ridan each was listed at 3 to 1.

Roman Line, Crimson Satan, Sunrise County, Vimy Ridge, Greek Money, Green Hornet, Prego and Flying Johnnie complete the field of the mile-and-three-sixteenths classic.

"I don't think Decidedly should even be the same price as Jaipur, he should be at higher odds," said Luro as handicappers wondered which horse would draw the most public support in the 86th running of Maryland's classic.

Has Better Record

"Jaipur has a good or a better record than Decidedly, he has won more races, more stakes and this should be taken into account," Luro added. But he also admitted that his Kentucky Derby winner has thrived in Maryland and actually gained about 20 pounds since he arrived from Churchill Downs where he smashed the track record in winning the Kentucky Derby two weeks ago.

"He has done very well here. He trained well on the track and I have high hopes he can get a little closer to the Triple Crown," the trainer said.

The Kentucky Derby, in which Decidedly erased Whirlaway's mark of 2:01 2-5 from the books by running the mile and one-quarter in 2:00 2-5, was Decidedly's first stakes win and only his fourth victory in 13 races. Bill Hartack rode the son of Determine at Louisville and once again will ride the lanky grey colt here.

Never Worse Than Second

Jaipur, on the other hand, never has been worse than second with six wins in nine races, including victories in the Gotham and Withers Stakes this year, his only two starts. He has won $290,774 while Decidedly has accumulated only $144,130, getting $119,650 of it in the Kentucky Derby.

Eddie Arcaro rode Jaipur last year while Willie Shoemaker handled the colt in his two victories this year. Arcaro has retired from riding and Shoemaker is committed to ride Cicada Saturday in the Acorn Stakes at Aqueduct, giving the mount on Jaipur to Bobby Ussery.

Salvation Army Beats Rotary Tossers, 4-1

Lefty Bill Deffenbaugh tossed a two-hitter and struck out eight as he pitched the Salvation Army to a 4-1 triumph over Rotary Club yesterday in a Hot Stove League contest at Penn Avenue field.

Starting their second season in the 10-team circuit on a successful note, Salvation Army garnered seven hits and took advantage of five walks to beat the Rotarians. Terry Deremer starred at shortstop for the winners.

In a game at Mason Road field, four bases on balls in the seventh forced home the winning run as Bedford Road's Optimists edged B'nai B'rith, 5-4, behind the tight pitching of Al Delbrugge.

Delbrugge scattered nine hits, walked two and struck out eight as he went the route for Coach Ced Miller's Optimists. Mike Wilt was the victim of his own wildness as he took the loss for the B'rithmen.

Wilt fanned nine, but issued six walks and hit three batsmen. He walked Gary Cessna, Joey Ashby, Dave Fram and Alvin Harris in the seventh inning to force in the run which broke a 4-4 tie to give Bedford Road the victory.

Lineweaver collected a home run and single and Wilt had a pair of singles for B'nai B'rith. Delbrugge and Pat Douglas each had two singles for Bedford Road, one of the latter's coming with the sacks loaded in the second to score two runs. Ashby played an outstanding game in center field for the winners. The results:

Phillies Bomb Cincinnati, 9-6

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia Phillies bombed Cincinnati pitching for three homers Thursday night to win a 9-6 decision which broke a Phils five-game losing streak and the Reds six-game winning streak.

Ted Savage, with a solo homer in the first, catcher Sammy White with a two-run homer in the fourth and Don Demeter with a three-run homer in the fifth supplied the power which brought 36-year-old Cal McLish his fourth victory without a loss.

McLish gave way for a pinch-batter in the eight. Jack Baldschun replaced him but gave up three straight hits for two Reds' runs in the ninth and Chris Short came in to get the side out.

Savage and White hit their homers off starter Jim O'Toole who dropped his fifth decision, while Demeter's wallop came off reliever Dave Sisler to crown the Phils' five-run sixth inning.

General Manager Pepper Wilson said the four, who led the Royals to their best showing in five years of National Basketball Association play, were Oscar Robertson, Jack Twyman, Wayne Embry and Arlen Bockhorn.

Earlier, Cincinnati received the sign contract of Frank Pinchback, who starred for Xavier of Cincinnati last season.

Bobcats Sweep Shenandoah, 7-6

Evans Wins Own Game With Single

Ronnie Evans singled home the winning run to cap a two-run rally in the bottom of the ninth as Frostburg State's Bobcats swept their series with Shenandoah College, 7-6, yesterday at Frostburg.

Frostburg's outburst came after Shenandoah had scored three times in the top of the ninth to go ahead 6-5. Hank Winner opened the inning with a single and was forced at second by Tom Smoot.

Denny Moore then doubled Smoot to third and George Lauder walked to fill the bases. John Nussear's single to left brought Smoot in with the tying run but Moore was thrown out at the plate trying to score also. Evans then won his own ball game by singling to center to bring Lauder home from third base.

Evans registered his third pitching triumph in going the route for Frostburg. He struck out 10 but walked eight. Shenandoah took advantage of two errors by shortstop Ted Femi in the ninth to go ahead briefly against the hard-throwing right-hander.

The triumph was the seventh in 11 games for Coach Harold Cordts' Bobcats who defeated Shenandoah 4-0 in their first meeting on April 18.

Winner, Moore and Evans paced the Frostburg attack with two hits apiece while Lauder banged a two-run homer in the sixth which gave the Bobcats an early 3-0 lead. Galovic had a double and single for Shenandoah. The lineups:

SPORTS S-P-U-T-T-E-R-I-N-G-S

By Walter L. Johns, Central Press Sports Editor

BASKETBALL put Jerry Lucas on the top of the sports pages and kept him there for nearly a dozen years. Now it is the means to an end to carry this serious young man to the top of the business world.

The three-time All-American from Ohio State, who told one and all that he would NOT play professional basketball, as he finished his career at Ohio State, has switched and signed a two-year contract to play with the Cleveland Pipers of the young American Basketball League.

But Lucas didn't sign a "basketball" contract, and he announced that to one and all in a press conference here. He signed a business contract.

Basketball "has been good to me," he said, but "it is only a means to an end."

The "end" is the business world.

"I know," the 6'7" star of the Bucks said as he answered questions of the newsmen, "that this is something I couldn't have obtained without basketball. But I don't just want to play basketball. I want to finish my education, get a master's degree and have some assurance of a future."

"I didn't sign a basketball contract, I signed a business contract. I could have received more money but I can't play basketball the rest of my life."

Lucas signed with the Pipers, according to Steinbrenner, who did a terrific selling job on the young man, for two years at $12,000 a year. But the deal includes an investment portfolio of stocks which will aggregate some $40,000 and which he will only have to pay a gift tax on. Additionally, he will have his education financed and he plans to finish up in the near future and go on to another school, perhaps Western Reserve U., to get a master's degree in marketing or business. Job offers with several big companies also are included.

• • •

ACCORDING to his confidante and advisor, Joe Hardy, who is president of Beta Theta Pi fraternity in Ohio, which Lucas belongs to at Ohio State (he has dropped out this quarter), the future will be up to Jerry for "there is nothing guaranteed" on the stock outlay. "But," he said, "Jerry decided that this was the best offer even though the Cincinnati Royals of the National Basketball League had made higher cash offers."

"The Royals' offer," says Jerry, "was not what I wanted. A strict basketball contract does not, has not, and will not, influence me."

Steinbrenner said that he had only three meetings with Lucas. But he was prepared to offer Jerry what the young man wanted.

Jerry signed the contract at 2 a.m. in Cleveland after a speech at Tiffin, O. Jerry has been making many speeches, in which he does well, and his speech-making schedule carries him to June 8.

He has seen the American circuit in operation and also the National loop. He says that Elgin Baylor is the best pro player he has seen and that he couldn't give an answer on whether the Ohio State team could have done any good in either of the pro leagues.

His wife, Treva, plans to continue her education for a teaching degree. They will move to Cleveland. His only relaxation is a game of golf and in a recent match in Columbus he shot an 86.

Yankees Edge Red Sox, 2-1

Win Game In Ninth Without Aid Of Hit

BOSTON (AP) — Courageous Marshall Bridges and veteran Bob Turley combined for a superb three-hit pitching job as the New York Yankees edged Boston 2-1 Thursday.

Despite being floored by a line smash off his forehead, reliever Bridges climbed back on the mound and completed the final two innings for his first American League victory and moved the Yanks into a tie for first place.

The defending world champions broke a 1-1 deadlock in the ninth inning by scoring without the aid of a base hit. Mickey Mantle drew a walk off Gene Conley, who lost a five-hitter. Mantle stole second after one out and continued to third when catcher Jim Pagliaroni threw the ball into center field. Mantle scored the winning run on Elston Howard's sacrifice fly to deep left field.

Bridges was decked when Pete Runnels' liner hit him in the forehead. Runnels, the second batter he faced in the eighth inning, was thrown out by Boyer who got the carom off Bridges' forehead.

Bridges shook off first aid, waved off a stretcher crew and insisted on remaining in action. He gave up the third Boston single to the next batter, Eddie Bressoud, but retired the next five men in order, two by strikeouts.

Turley was making his first start since July 4, 1961, and the man who popularized the no-wind-up pitching style a few years ago, checked the Sox on only two singles. Both came in the second inning when the Red Sox scored their only run.

Philadelphia Eagles Sign Grandelius

Sonny Is Named Backfield Coach

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Everett (Sonny) Grandelius, former University of Colorado coach who was dismissed last March for alleged over-zealous recruiting, was signed Thursday as offensive backfield coach of the Philadelphia Eagles.

His appointment rounds out a five man staff, the biggest in Eagles' history, which includes holdovers Jerry Williams and Lauri Niemi and the recently signed Chuck Cherundolo.

Grandelius stepped into work immediately with head coach Nick Skorich, working on both the offense and defense problems preparatory to the team going to camp next July.

The former Michigan star, who also played with the New York Giants said he was "happy and grateful" to Skorich and Eagles general manager Vince McNally.

"It's wonderful to be back," Sonny said, adding "they have me working already."

While he said he expected to feel his way along, he added that "this is football...and pro football is thorough. You don't have the problems of collegiate coaching, and there's no question about the ability of the players. You can teach them more, and it's certainly football at its finest."

BESPECTACLED BACKSTOP

Forty-Ninth LaSalle-Fort Hill Battle Tops Baseball Card Today

City Contest To Break 3-Way Tie For Lead

Allegany Will Face Aggies; Beall To Invade Mt. Savage

The forty-ninth game of the series between Fort Hill's Sentinels and LaSalle's Explorers is scheduled today at 4 p. m., at Fort Hill Field where Coach "Bobby" Cavanaugh's tossers will put a five-game winning streak on the line and will be seeking revenge for a 5-2 setback in their first meeting this season.

LaSalle, Fort Hill and Allegany are deadlocked for first place in the Eastern Division of the Allegany County High School Baseball League at 5-1 and only two of the teams are expected to remain tied after today's Fort Hill-LaSalle tilt.

Allegany High figures to beat winless Flintstone High School in their game at Campobello.

Beall Plays Mt. Savage

Beall High, the leader, and Mt. Savage, the runner-up in the Western Division, clash at Mt. Savage today while Valley and Bruce tangle at Westernport.

Since 1937, LaSalle and Fort Hill have met 48 times and the Sentinels hold a 30-18 edge in victories. Twelve times the schools have split even in their series, Fort Hill has made eight sweeps and LaSalle has taken two of the two-game series.

Allegany has beaten Flintstone 17 times in 18 engagements since 1952 and has won 12 in a row since the Aggies' lone victory in the final game of the 1955 series. The Campers copped the first game this season by the score of 17-6.

Beall is 5-2 and Mt. Savage 4-3 and a victory for the Indians would tie the teams for first place in the Western Division. Bruce has won three and lost four and Valley is in the basement with 1-6.

Keyser At Paw Paw

Paw Paw High's Pirates, still in the running for the Potomac Valley Conference title, play an important game with Keyser High School today at Paw Paw. Keyser dropped the series opener, 9-2.

The Pirates are 6-2 and have two more games on their schedule. Mathias has closed its season and leads the race with an 8-2 record. Southern of Oakland is 3-1 and has four games to play.

In other games on today's card, Southern hosts Fort Ashby's Eagles, Moorefield visits Wardensville and Petersburg opposes Bayard at the latter place.

Birds Hand Bo Belinsky First Loss

BALTIMORE (UPI)—The Baltimore Orioles routed Bo Belinsky in the third inning and went on to down the Los Angeles Angels, 6-4, Thursday night and hand the rookie southpaw his first defeat after five straight victories.

Belinsky, who pitched a no-hit, no-run game against the Orioles two weeks ago in Los Angeles, added a 10th hitless inning Thursday night before Boog Powell hit a 400-foot line-drive home run in the second inning, scoring Gus Triandos who had walked.

When Jackie Brandt followed Powell with another home run, Belinsky threw the resin bag high into the air and the fans booed.

Doubles by Jerry Adair and Triandos, plus a walk to Powell, brought on reliever Dean Chance. Chance gave up a double to Brandt, completing the six-run assault on Belinsky, whose performance was witnessed by his father, sister and cousin who drove in from Trenton, N.J.

Baltimore's Art Quirk got the win, although he needed eighth inning relief help from Hoyt Wilhelm, who finished the game. Wilhelm was helped out in the ninth inning by a sensational catch by Brandt in centerfield off a drive by Leon Wagner with two runners aboard.

Wilhelm gave up two runs in the ninth inning but preserved Quirk's second victory against two losses.

Gilmore at Barton
Lonaconing at Zihlman
Westernport idle

Zihlman overcame a 7-2 deficit and shoved over two runs in the top of the eighth inning yesterday to hand Cumberland's Comets their initial setback in the Twilight Baseball League at Fort Hill field. The score was 11-9.

Bob Mugsford who started for Cumberland, was taken out and came back again in the late innings, was the loser as he and three other Cumberland pitchers were lathered for 15 hits by Zihlman.

Pat Folk went the distance for the winners, settling down after being bombed for six runs by the Cumberlanders in the first inning. He was touched for 10 hits but registered his first mound victory when singles by Haupt and Bridges, a squeeze bunt and Smith's double plated the winning runs for Zihlman in the eighth. The loss knocked Cumberland out of first place in the circuit.

Smith Paces Attack

Smith paced the Zihlman attack with a single, double and three-bagger while Deffinbaugh and Bridges each had three hits also.

Donnie Lewis topped Cumberland at the plate with a single, double and triple and Pooch Lewis collected a double and single as the Comets saw their five-game winning streak go by the boards.

In a slugfest at Midland, Gilmore's tossers scored their first win after five losses by beating Franklin 12-8. The victors exploded for eight runs in the sixth inning after trailing 7-4 at the end of five frames.

George Winters won his first game as he limited Franklin to seven hits including a double by Bennett and a three-bagger by Metz.

Barton's Braves turned a tight mound duel into a runaway by scoring seven runs in the last inning as they beat Lonaconing, 10-2, yesterday at Lonaconing.

Wilson Is Winner

Leading 3-0 at the end of the sixth, Barton kayoed the home team with the big outburst, then held on as Lonaconing rallied briefly for two runs in the bottom half of the inning. Bill Wilson was the winning pitcher while Richard Cutter absorbed the loss.

Westernport took over first place in the circuit by playing an 8-8 tie with Midland to remain undefeated. The game at Westernport was called after six innings because of darkness.

Dave Coleman and Donnie Raines each obtained three hits for Westernport, both hitting for the circuit. Fay Often and Jim Evans had two hits apiece for Midland. The results:

Gibson Outduels O'Dell For Win

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — St. Louis scored an unearned run off Billy O'Dell in the ninth inning Thursday and beat San Francisco 1-0 behind the six-hit pitching of Bob Gibson.

It was Gibson's fifth victory against two losses. He struck out 10 Giants and often had them swinging late at his fast ball.

In the ninth, Red Schoendienst singled to left with none out. Julian Javier, running for Schoendienst, stole second with one down and moved to third when Ed Bailey's low throw went into center field.

Javier scored on Charley James' two out single to deep shortstop.

Gibson gave only one hit until the sixth inning. He was in constant trouble from then on. Jim Davenport doubled with one out in the seventh. Jose Pagan smashed a liner past second but Schoendienst flashed to his right, grabbed the ball and doubled off Davenport.

San Francisco loaded the bases in the eighth with one out. But Orlando Cepeda bounced into a double play.

The B. P. O. Elks knocked the Celanese A. A. out of the unbeaten ranks yesterday but Loyal Order of Moose and the V. F. W.'s defending champions sailed along to their fourth and third straight wins, respectively, in the Rocking Chair Softball League.

Lou Baker kept eight hits scattered and pitched effectively with runners on the bases to give the Elks their first win of the season over the previously unbeaten Silkmen at Celanese Field by the score of 9-4.

Manager Walter "Pooch" Orndorff batted in three of the Elks' runs with a double and single in four trips and Glenn Kline also had two hits for the victors. Bill Ware and Bill Thompson shared four of the Celanese team's eight blows. The defeat was charged to Webb Hull, who started on the mound for the Silks and was relieved by Fisher in the third inning after the Elks had taken a 6-1 lead.

Eckard Scores Shutout

Jack "Beef" Eckard turned in a 5-hit pitching performance as the Vets blanked the C. & P. Telephone Company at Stitcher Field by the score of 9-0.

The champs racked up 10 hits with Jimmy Eckard smashing a triple and single, Ted Durbin a double and single and "Butch" Johnson a solo homer in the sixth inning. Joe Niland took the loss.

Loyal Order of Moose rallied for four runs in the top of the ninth to whip Pittsburgh Plate Glass at Post Field by the score of 8-4.

Herman Lewis opened the rally by drawing a walk. After Price sacrificed, Warnick singled and Bob Keyser drove in two runs with a double. Pete Cecil, whose triple tied the score at 4-4 in the 7th and sent the game into extra innings, capped off the explosion with a two-run homer to centerfield.

Perfect Day For Cecil

Cecil, incidentially, had a perfect day at the plate with a homer, triple, two walks and a sacrifice. Keyser larruped a pair of doubles, Paul McGregor rapped a two-bagger and single and Dick Klavuhn, who posted his fourth pitching victory of the campaign, collected two safeties.

Clay Ingram and Baker garnered two hits each for P. P. G. Bill Thompson went the route on the mound for the losers.

Ritter's A. C. moved into the .500 class with a 2-2 record by downing the Caseys at Campobello by the score of 7-5.

Odell Warnick got the win but Don Decker turned in a nice relief job after coming on in the 6th and yielded only one hit. Dave Ritter homered in the second inning. Vernon Shrout garnered a pair of bingles and Fred Comer and Fred Meeks smacked two-baggers for Ritter's. Tommy Mullaney accounted for two of the Casey's six hits, "Bink" King banged a triple and Bob McGreevy rapped a double.

Southern High School took a wild ball game from Keyser High School yesterday at Keyser by the score of 15-6 and remained in the race with Mathias (8-2) and Paw Paw (6-2) for the championship of the Potomac Valley Conference.

The victory was the third in four starts for the Garrett countians who are playing an eight-game schedule.

Calvin G. Wilhide Hits Jackpot Again At Shenandoah Races

CHARLES TOWN, W.Va. (AP) —Calvin G. Wilhide, the Thurmont, Md., mail truck driver who won $17,000 on the twin-double at Shenandoah Downs April 27, did it again Thursday night — this time to the tune of $13,108.60.

Wilhide was the only bettor at Thursday night's races to have Jublet, a $10.20 winner of the eighth race and the magic fourth winner needed to complete the doubles combination.

Thursday night's double brought to over $30,000 the amount realized by Wilhide on his two $2 bet.

The Western Maryland mail truck driver used his first doubles winnings to buy a race horse, King Tar, which won one and ran second in two others since running under Wilhide's silks.

Wilhide, who admits buying a "fistful of tickets" to get started in the pools, collected Thursday night on Dot's Fantasy at $27.80; Always Fair at $20.20 and Risky Jim at $19.20 in addition to Jublet.

Cards Of Thanks

I wish to thank all those who were so kind to me during my recent bereavement, the death of my beloved husband, GEOFFRAY CALDWELL. I especially thank Rev. Snyder, the Eagles, those who sent flowers, those who donated the use of cars for the funeral, the pallbearers, and all others who in any other manner rendered assistance.
MRS. HILDA CALDWELL

The Vanderbilt Team-of-Four Championship recently concluded at the Spring Nationals in Lexington, Ky., produced a stunning upset when an unseated team from St. Louis led by Jerry Leavitt emerged as the winner. After enacting the role of giant killer in the earlier rounds, Leavitt's aggregate edged out my own team and that of Sam Stayman in the final round robin.

A hand that contributed to our second place finish is presented today. My teammates, Boris Koytchou and Harold Ogust, uncovered a profitable sacrifice against a vulnerable slam which their opponents had bid.

East opened the bidding with one diamond and West elected to respond with one spade. Koytchou, seated North, made a strategic take-out double. With favorable vulnerability, it was his purpose to investigate, at the lower levels, the prospects for a save. East ignored the double and raised his partner's spades. West now probed for further information by showing the ace of hearts. Koytchou repeated his double and East bid four diamonds.

Reassured as to the solidity of the diamond suit, West embarked on a Blackwood inquiry. When East announced possession of two aces by responding with five hearts, Ogust, seated South, entered the proceedings with a double. Despite the fact that his holding was distinctly anemic, he realized that his values in clubs and hearts represented a good fit for partner and it was his intention to encourage a sacrifice against the ultimate slam bid.

When West proceeded to six spades, North bid six no trump, a bid which obviously couldn't mean what it suggested. Instead, it suggests to partner that he select one of the remaining two suits. South obliged by bidding seven hearts and West's double closed the auction. In the play, the defense took two hearts, one spade, and one diamond to administer a 700 point set. At the other table, my team held the East-West hands, and they reached a six spade contract with little interference from the opposition. The contract was fulfilled without difficulty, and the trick score of 1,430 points produced a net gain of 730 on the deal to our forces.

Canvass Shows Van Meter Won Over Vandegrift

Other Returns Still Unofficial

Judge J. French VanMeter's nomination for re-election to Orphans Court was confirmed late last night in a special official canvass by Matthew J. Mullaney, chairman of the Board of Election Supervisors and Irvin J. Neat, Republican registrar.

Judge Van Meter polled an official total of 2,321 votes, defeating Howard W. Vandegrift for the third place on the court by 91 votes. Mr. Vandegrift had 2,230.

Unofficial returns had shown the two candidates to be only four votes apart, Judge Van Meter with 2,224 and Mr. Vandegrift with 2,220. Later an error in tabulation was discovered and Judge Van Meter's margin widened to more than 80 votes.

The official canvass shows that Judge Van Meter got 2,314 votes on the voting machines, two armed services absentee votes, and five civilian absentee votes.

Mr. Vandegrift got 2,226 votes on machines in the polling places, two armed service absentee votes and two civilian absentee votes.

The official canvass for other offices will not be completed until sometime this morning. Election officials decided to complete the canvass for the two Orphans Court candidates last night so that the closest contest on the basis of unofficial returns could be definitely decided.

Col. Douglas To Present New Reserve Center

Col. Robert H. Douglas, deputy commander and chief of staff of the XXI Army Corps, will formally present the Allegany County Soldier's Memorial U. S. Army Reserve Center to the people of the county at a dedication ceremony Saturday.

The public ceremony will be held at 1:30 p. m. on the front lawn of the new center on U. S. Route 220 at the north edge of Cresaptown. In case of rain the ceremony will be held inside the center. Former Chief Judge George Henderson will give the dedication address.

Col. Douglas, who will come here from corps headquarters at Indiantown Gap, Pa., is a native of Swarthmore, Pa., and a 1933 graduate of West Point.

During World War II he served in Europe with the 99th Infantry Division, which won the Distinguished Unit Citation for its combat conduct in the Battle of the Bulge.

After the war he served in Germany, the U. S., the Panama Canal Zone, and Korea. He also graduated from the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., and later taught there for two years.

Master of ceremonies for the dedication program on Saturday will be Col. Randolph Millholland Jr. of Cumberland, retired commander of the 115th Infantry Regiment, Maryland National Guard.

Col. Millholland, who spent 37 years in the National Guard, is paymaster at Kelly-Springfield Tire Company.

A native of Cumberland, he graduated from Allegany County High School in 1926, having enlisted in the Guard two years earlier.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1932 and became commander of Company G in 1933.

Called to duty as a captain in World War II, he was promoted to major in 1942 while attached to the British GHQ Battle School at Barnard Castle, Derbyshire, England.

In December 1942 he was assigned to form the Second Ranger Battalion (Provisional), which was attached to the British commandos for a time.

After D-Day in 1944 he rejoined the 29th Division and became commander of the Third Battalion, 115th Infantry Regiment. He was promoted to lieutenant colonel on his 38th birthday, September 21, 1944.

Wounded at Searsdorf, Germany, in November 1944, Millholland was hospitalized until February of the next year, when he resumed command of his battalion.

After the end of the war in Europe he served with 29th Division headquarters, then became military government director in the Bremen enclave.

In 1946 the 115th Regiment was reorganized with Millholland as executive officer. He became regimental commander in 1951 with the rank of colonel, and retired January 30, 1961.

He has been with Kelly-Springfield since 1945.

'Sick And Tired'

State Unit Gets Baseball Bat From Artmor Plastics

BALTIMORE (AP)—Maryland's Department of Economic Development has a baseball bat, now, to go with that glove. Trouble is, the glove is only a work glove—not much good for stopping hot line drives.

IN STATE CONTEST — Mary Frances Schwenninger, winner of the first annual spelling bee sponsored by Victor Tambolleo Post 1712, Catholic War Veterans, will participate in the state finals Sunday at 7:30 p. m. at Bishop Curley High School, Baltimore.

For the background of this little industrial double play, you have to go back to May 9, when the department mailed the glove and a message to 2,500 selected industrial firms across the country.

The white work glove was glued to dark brown cardboard. Beside the glove, in yellow letters, was the message: "We're ready to go to work for you."

The idea was to have interested company officials mail back a self-addressed envelope to Annapolis. They then would be sent a matching glove, plus information about Maryland's resources and plant sites.

The department got the baseball bat ("Junior Leaguer No. 5") in the mail this week from Artmor Plastics Corp. of Cumberland. Securely attached was this message:

"Now that the offer has been made (to outside industry) to put on gloves and 'go to work' for them, how about going to bat for some Maryland industry — that's worth just as much through growth potential?"

Artmor Plastics put its message in a transparent, plastic envelope, of course. In an accompanying letter to the state agency, Artmor President Arthur C. Morgan said:

"Never let it be said, gentlemen, that I ever have, or am to any degree, even now, objecting to your efforts to bring new industry into Maryland. Anyone having even elementary powers of reasoning should be lending whatever aid he has within his means to provide, to help such a program.

"Neither am I objecting (to even an infinitesimal degree; your use of mailing gimmicks for the sake of getting attention and making apropros illustrations. . .

"What I am damned sick and tired of, is the refusal of seemingly educated people to face real facts realistically.

"We've not, of course, been the recipient of any of the overtures that are being made towards outside industries. But even though we do understand why and, again, insist that you should be doing such things, we're ready to bet that overtures have gone to firms having a lot less potential than we could show, if anyone were willing to look and listen a bit."

10,490 May Cast Votes In Coming City Elections

City Clerk Wallace G. Ullery announced yesterday that 10,490 residents will be eligible to cast ballots in the municipal primary election on June 5 and the general election June 19.

That was the number of persons listed on the city registration records when the books were closed Tuesday afternoon. Books will not be available until June 26.

A total of 811 citizens registered at City Hall from May 1 until the books were closed. Registration totaled 9,679 on May 1.

Based on total registration on Wednesday, Jaycees will need 2,098 valid names on Council-Manager petitions to place the question on the June 19 ballot.

Church Seeks $750,000 For College Work

Members of the Church of the Brethren in this Southeast Region are in the midst of a campaign to raise $750,000 for a modern library and home economics building at Bridgewater (Va.) College.

Guiding the "Crusade For Excellence" effort in this area are retired Judge Ernest A. See of Keyser, Rev. Levi Ziegler, pastor of the Westernport Church of the Brethren, and Arlyn Arnold of Petersburg, W. Va.

Dr. Warren D. Bowman, president of Bridgewater College, addressed some 60 campaign workers at a dinner Monday at the Sunnyside Church of the Brethren in Mineral County.

Dr. Bowman cited six main purposes of Bridgewater College. They are:

(1) To provide a superior higher education for choice youth under wholesome Christian influences; (2) to select students carefully, (3) to provide effective teaching, (4) to give the students a "world view," (5) to create a spiritual side of life and (6) to give purpose to what happens to a student in the life he carries outside of college 10 or 15 years after he graduates.

The next meeting, a training session for all workers, will be held at 7 p.m. DST Tuesday in the Sunnyside Church. At this meeting a film will be shown to the total organization.

Test Period To End

State Files Appeal In Motor Case

State's Attorney James S. Getty yesterday filed an appeal on a decision handed down in Trial Magistrate Court May 12.

The case involved John Moffatt, 16, of 743½ Fayette Street, who was found not guilty of operating a motor vehicle at speeds greater than reasonable. The case was tried by Magistrate F. Allan Weatherholt.

Moffatt was charged as a result of a two-car accident April 15 in LaVale. Theodore Martin of LaVale, driver of the other car, died April 17, apparently of injuries sustained in the accident.

Civil War Units To Take Part In Virginia Battle

Cumberland Continentals and the Old German Artillery, sponsored by the Queen City Brewery, local reactivated Civil War Union military companies, will participate in a parade and Centennial battle re-enactment Saturday at Front Royal, Va. The parade will be at 11 a.m. and the battle at 2:30 p.m.

The two units will meet at Johnson's Restaurant on West Virginia Route 28 at 8 a.m. Saturday.

The re-enactment will be the battle for Front Royal between "Stonewall" Jackson's Confederates and Col. Kenley's First Maryland Federal force. This battle was the beginning of Gen. Jackson's 1862 Valley Campaign.

The Continentals will be the left anchor of the Union line. They will have to repulse two flank attacks, the first a surprise attack by Taylor's Louisiana Brigade (Wheat's Louisiana Tigers). They will also provide infantry support for Knapp's two-gun Union artillery battery, commanded by Acting Lt. Tim Doolan.

The Old German Artillery will not take its 1857 howitzer to Front Royal, but the gunners will serve a 2,300-pound Napoleon field cannon. The Sharpsburg Rifles Artillery will man the other Napoleon cannon of the Union battery. Crutchfield's Confederate battery will consist of four 12-pound Napoleon cannon. Some 250 rounds will be fired by the six Civil War cannon during the re-enactment.

The public is invited to attend the centennial battle re-enactment.

Educational TV Defended When Used Wisely

Mt. Royal PTA Hears Dr. Brish

Closed-circuit television was defended last night as a valuable resource for education when used for a comparatively small part of the school day.

That view was presented by Dr. William M. Brish, superintendent of schools in neighboring Washington County, who addressed the Mt. Royal School PTA on that topic last night. Dr. Brish was accompanied to Cumberland by Robert F. Lesher, coordinator for the closed circuit educational TV system in the Washington County schools.

Washington County is now in its sixth year in the use of television in the classroom. The first five years the experiment was underwritten by the Ford Foundation through a grant from the Association for Advancement of Education. This is the first year of its operation without a Ford Foundation subsidy.

Can Be Good Or Bad

Dr. Brish said that Washington County did some preliminary investigation about television in the schools after a member of the County Board of Education made a chance remark about what the school system was doing about television.

The school superintendent said that his county at that time was embarked on a $10 million school building program and he wrote to various sources to find out what provisions would be necessary in construction to assure that TV coverage could be received in the new schools.

Dr. Brish contended that television can be good or bad, depending upon its use. He said he believed educators have the responsibility to see that it is used for good.

Television has helped broaden the school program. He pointed out that many school textbooks are three to 10 years old. By wise use of television, current knowledge can be made available in the classroom.

Teachers Learn, Too

Dr. Brish noted that teachers ordinarily never see other teachers in action. Television enables teachers to learn something from the techniques of the best teachers.

In elementary schools, television has proved helpful, especially in music, art and science. It has permitted the introduction of French into the elementary school curriculum in Washington County.

In junior and senior high schools, experience has shown that large classes can be taught by television two or three times a week and then the class can be broken up into small groups the other two or three days so that the students can get specialized attention.

Television has enabled pupils to become eye witnesses to history as in the round-the-world flight of Col. John Glenn in February.

He stressed that television should not be considered a replacement but an extra to the educational program.

Radio Scope Contracts Awarded

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three contracts totaling slightly over $1.5 million for work on the 140-foot radio telescope at Green Bank, W. Va., were awarded Wednesday by the National Science Foundation.

The telescope is under construction at the National Radio Astronomy Observatory at Green Bank, which is operated for the foundation by Associated Universities Inc.

A contract for fabrication of the components that will bear the weight of the telescope was awarded to Westinghouse Electric Corp., Pittsburgh.

The Sun Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., Chester, Pa., received a contract for construction of the horse shoe-shaped steel structure on which its reflecting surface will be mounted.

The National Science Foundation said the target date for finishing the $13 million telescope still was 1964.

"Although not the largest instrument of its kind, the 140-foot radio telescope is designed to be one of the most stable and precise in the world," the foundation said.

Shooting, Two Truck Blasting Cases Probed

Police in nearby Mineral County are investigating two truck dynamitings and a shooting they believe may be connected with a dispute between West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company at Luke and the Tri-State Pulpwood Cooperative Association Inc.

A truck was dynamited on West Virginia Route 46 between Keyser and Fort Ashby Wednesday morning and another truck was dynamited the same day on Green Mountain.

Arthur E. Shanholtz of Pleasant Dale, W. Va. told paper company officials at Luke that his truck was struck by a bullet fired from a high-powered rifle while he was driving on the east slope of Knobley Mountain on U. S. Route 50.

Driver Wounded

Cpl. F. W. Armstrong of the State Police detachment at Keyser said a bullet from a rifle smashed through the left door of the truck cab, narrowly missing Shanholtz.

The bullet ricocheted around the cab before disintegrating, one of the pieces entering the right leg of the driver.

The dynamiting on Green Mountain caused extensive damage to an empty truck owned by James W. Martin. The bed of the vehicle and back of the cab were damaged.

Reward Is Offered

Meanwhile the association, under federal court order to limit its picketing and to avoid violence, has offered a reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons responsible for these and earlier similar incidents.

Members of the association started picketing the plant March 26 to back up demands that member pulpwood producers be given more money for their product.

Owner Charged With Arson In Fire At Garage

Charles W. Turner In County Jail

A local man was arrested yesterday by city police and charged with arson in connection with a fire on Wednesday night in a remodeled garage he owns at 357 Williams Street.

Charles W. Turner Jr., 41, of 113 Fifth Street, was taken to the Allegany County jail and is expected to be given a preliminary hearing this morning in Trial Magistrate's Court.

A warrant charging Turner with arson was obtained yesterday by County Investigator Edwin R. Lilya who along with Detective Kenneth W. Morrissey questioned the man.

The fire was reported about 9:45 p.m. Wednesday and was extinguished by firemen from South End station. The garage had been remodeled into a printing shop, police said.

The interior of the building was charred. Authorities said there was no equipment in the premises.

An investigation was conducted by the fire prevention bureau of the Fire Department in cooperation with the City Police Department's detective bureau and the state's attorney's office.

Fire Chief Virgil A. Parker said there were definite indications that fire had been set in two places in the building.

City Manager Petition Count Will End Today

The staff of the City Clerk's Office, by working day and night, has validated more than half enough signatures to put the Council-Manager proposal on the June 19 ballot. They expect to complete the count today.

City Clerk Wallace G. Ullery and members of his staff by noon yesterday had verified 1,028 names, slightly less than half the 2,098 signatures needed to force the issue to a referendum.

Mr. Ullery said the count was "not going too fast."

By 3:30 p.m., more than half of the petitions had been checked, and work was scheduled last night so the count can be completed today.

The 2,098 valid signatures needed represents 20 per cent of the 10,490 voters listed on city registration records when books were closed Tuesday afternoon.

The count has been running at the rate of about 100 verified signatures an hour, and has been complicated by the heavy registration just before the books were closed.

The petition count is being expedited under a schedule set Monday by the Mayor and Council, which authorized Mr. Ullery and City Solicitor William R. Carscaden to authenticate the petitions and report today.

A resolution providing for placing the issue on the June 19 ballot has been prepared and is scheduled to be presented to Council Monday if enough signatures are validated.
